'Dutch Treat' Affair

The Community Chest Federation drive for $3,900,000 or more aimed at reducing human suffering in Greater Washington will begin today.

The campaign, which will touch virtually every family in the metropolitan area in one way or another, will be formally launched at a "kick-off" Dutch treat luncheon at 12:30 p. m. in Hotel Mayflower.

Edward J. Foley, jr., assistant secretary of the Treasury and campaign chairman, will tell more than 700 expected guests just how badly funds are needed to run the 125 Red Feather agencies. Dr. Peter Marshall, chaplain of the Senate and pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, also will speak.

Eisenhower to Speak

Tomorrow, at 4 p. m., on the south steps of the Treasury Building, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will address a campaign rally. Many notables are expected to attend.

Six State Department offices yesterday reached more than 100 per cent of the Chest quotas, giving added impetus to the all-out effort.

Office exceeding their goals, following three days of intensive campaigning, were: Office of the Secretary and Undersecretary, Office of the Assistant Secretary for Political Affairs, Office of American Republic Affairs, Office of Special Political Affairs, the Far Eastern Commission and the Institute of Inter-American Affairs.

Quota for some 5500 State Department employes is set at $62,715.

In Alexandria, meanwhile, more than 100 workers yesterday launched the city's drive for $58,000 in the Chest campaign at a "kick-off" breakfast at the George Mason Hotel.

Alexandria's Share

Campaign Chairman Foley, in the keynote address, told the assembled civic leaders, unit chairmen and volunteer workers that Alexandria will receive $121,919 for its 14 Red Feather Agencies while it is being asked to raise only $58,000.

The goal, Foley explained, has been set in relation to the community's ability to pay, but agency budgets are based on their needs.

One minute speakers who preceded Foley were Mayor William T. Wilkins, Community Chest Federation Director Edward Keyes, Alexandria Community Chest President Albert A. Smoot and Alexandria 1948 Campaign Chairman Marvin L. Wilson.

Rabbi Hugo L. Schiff pronounced the invocation and the Rev. Thomas A. Fraser, president of the Alexandria Ministerial Association made the benediction.

Court Orders Rep. Craven to Pay Arkansas Tax

By a Post Reporter

Fort Smith, Ark., Nov. 5.—Congressmen, because they are exempted along with other Federal employes from the District of Columbia income tax, are liable for State income taxes, the Arkansas Supreme Court ruled last week.

The high court upheld a lower court at Fort Smith that Representative Fadjo Cravens must pay his State income tax.

Cravens contested a suit brought by State Revenue Commissioner Otho A. Cook, claiming that he was not liable because he did not maintain a permanent place of abode in Arkansas, earned his salary outside the State, and spent more than six months out of each year in Wash-

Inquest Into Bunch Death Starts, Stops

Family's Attorney Attacks Legality of Reopened Hearing

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Inquest into the death of John Forrest Bunch was reopened yesterday, but abruptly suspended an hour later when the legality of the hearing was questioned.

The legal query was raised by John R. Fitzpatrick, attorney for the family of Bunch, the 64-year-old carpenter who died of head injuries at Gallinger Hospital six days after being arrested by District police.

Fitzpatrick contended that the life of the six-man coroner's jury had automatically expired when it issued a verdict of "accidental" death in the Bunch case on August 13, and that thereafter the jury could not be recalled for a further or new inquest.

On the basis of this contention, Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy adjourned the hearing until he could get legal advice.

To Ask for Ruling

In halting the proceedings, the deputy coroner announced he would seek a decision from the "Federal courts," but he later explained that he meant to ask the corporation counsel's office for a ruling first.

A transcript of yesterday's hearing will be sent to Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West this morning, Murphy said. Meanwhile, pending resumption of the hearing or other action, the 40 witnesses who assembled yesterday at the District Morgue still are on call under subpena, Murphy said.

Fitzpatrick, who has been pressing for a full hearing into what he termed the "strange death" of Bunch, told The Washington Post that he had questioned the legality of the second inquest because he wants to be sure that "the facts" in the case are brought out in proceedings which are legal without the taint of doubt.

Autopsy Disclosures

The family of John Forrest Bunch hired Fitzpatrick to investigate the circumstances surrounding the death of the carpenter August 4. Six days earlier, police of the Ninth Precinct arrested Bunch on the charge of intoxication. While in confinement, he was taken once to Gallinger Hospital, returned to his police cell, and later the same day taken to the hospital a second time. An autopsy disclosed a fractured [illegible] and two brain hemorrhages.

Bunch's widow and children have charged that Bunch's death may have occurred as a result of police

Plan Would Provide 3000 Part-Timers With Regular Classes

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The transfer of five white schools to use by Negro pupils was proposed to the Board of Education yesterday by Dr. Hobart M. Corning, District superintendent of schools.

More than 3000 Negro children now on part-time schedules would be placed on a full-time program as a result of the transfer, Dr. Corning said.

Currently 6825 pupils are attending school part time. Of these, 5925 are Negroes.

Action on the proposal was deferred until next week by the board to give board members and Washington residents opportunity to discuss it.

Dr. Robert A. Maurer, acting president, called a special meeting of the board with its committee on buildings and grounds to act on the proposal at 1 p. m. Wednesday. Organizations wishing to express an opinion were asked by Dr. Maurer to send representatives to the meeting.

Would Abandon Five

The five proposed for transfer are Blow Elementary School, 19th st. and Benning rd. s.e.; Webb Elementary School, 15th and Rosedale sts. ne.; Hayes Elementary School, 5th and K sts. ne.; S. J. Bowen Elementary School, 3d and K sts. sw., and Lenox Occupational School, 5th st. between G st. and Virginia ave. sw.

The superintendent also recommended that the board abandon five buildings for school use. Two would be returned to the District government and the remaining three used for furniture repair and storage.

Scheduled to be returned to the District government for other use are the Lincoln Elementary School, 3d and C sts. se., and the old Hamilton Elementary School, 1611 Bladensburg rd. ne.

Other Recommendations

Recommended for use as a repair shop is the Dent Elementary School, 2d st. and South Carolina ave. se., and for storage the Hilton Elementary School, 6th st. between B and C sts. ne., and the Corcoran Elementary School, 28th st. between M and Olive sts. nw.

The Lincoln School is now occupied by Negro students. The Hamilton School is currently used as a repair shop. The Dent, Hilton and Corcoran Schools are used by white students.

Under the proposal, students attending the five white schools would be transferred as follows:

Blow and Webb students to an elementary school unit in unused classrooms at Eastern High School, 17th and East Capitol sts.

Hayes students to the Blair Elementary School, I st. between 6th and 7th sts. ne.; Ludlow Elementary School, 6th and G sts. ne.; Madison Elementary School, 10th

A Beard Was Yanked

Amish Bishop and Churchmen Sued by Ostracized Member

Wooster, Ohio, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Four bearded Amish defendants in a $40,000 suit charging them with ostracizing one of their number stalked silently into court here today, keeping their broad-brimmed hats on the counsel table and prepared to defend themselves.

Their religion allowed them no attorneys, and they carried no brief cases, no documents. Their counsel table was useful only for holding their hats.

The four were John Helmuth of Beach City, Ohio, bishop of the Helmuth Amish Mennonite Church and of the North Valley district of the church; Isaac T. Miller, a deacon; John J. Nisley and Emanuel Wengerd, two church officials.

They sat expressionless and silent as Charles C. Jones, attorney for Andy Yoder, the plaintiff, who charged he had been mited (ostracized), told how Yoder once became so enraged at Bishop Helmuth that he pulled him outside the Yoder home by his 7-inch beard.

Yoder brought his suit on the basis of the mite placed against him by the church in 1942 because he bought an automobile against church rules. He said he needed the car to take his infant daughter, Lizzie, to Wooster twice a week for treatments for a spinal ailment.

Yoder claimed he quit the church then and joined a more liberal one, but was mited so strictly by the congregation that

Conference Slate Wins In Arlington

First School Board Elected; Mrs. Cannon And Chew Named To County Board

With one ballot count virtually complete in Arlington County at a late hour last night, these results became definite:

1. The five-candidate slate of the Arlington School Board Nominating Conference had been swept into office.

2. Elected to two county board posts were F. Freeland Chew, incumbent, and Mrs. Florence Cannon.

Members of Arlington's new school board, elected for the first time in county history, are Mrs. Elizabeth P. Campbell, Barnard Joy, Colin MacPherson, O. Glenn Stahl and Curtis E. Tuthill.

At the same time the electorate has returned a majority of incumbent office-holders to their posts.

A bond issue to finance an incinerator for the county also was given approval.

One Precinct Still Out

One precinct was still unreported as the county wound up the longest election count in Arlington.

As a result of the election the county saw the need for speeding up its vote counting.

And last night, the three-man county electoral board met to take immediate steps to modernize the obsolete voting procedure, which has been under constant criticism since Arlington began to experience its phenomenal growth at the beginning of the decade.

Results Delayed

The voting procedure kept outcome of the election in doubt until nearly 6 p. m. yesterday when Ballston Precinct workers after toiling since 6 a. m. Tuesday, completed their count. Although 763 votes remained to be recounted at Clarendon No. 1, it appeared evident that results at that precinct probably would not have any effect on the final outcome of the race.

The Ballston results proved the turning point in a race for County Board seats which had been close as a hair's breadth during the preceding period.

With 10 of 11 precincts now reported, the County Board results were:

F. Freeland Chew, 4874.
Mrs. Florence Cannon, 4584.
Oscar Smith, 4316.
Harry W. Cuppett, 4095.

Half of the ballots in the missing precinct had been tallied late last night with the following unofficial count: Cuppett, 176; Chew, 158; Mrs. Cannon, 116, and Smith, 96.

In the Commonwealth's Attorney contest, on the basis of the vote in 10 of the 11 precincts, Denman T. Ruiker, Democrat, who served as assistant Commonwealth's Attorney under Lawrence W. Douglas, defeated his Republican opponent, Oren R. Lewis. The vote stood 5364 to 5239.

Democrats assured of victory were Charles A. Fenwick for the State Senate; incumbents J. Maynard Magruder and George Damm for the Virginia House of Delegates; Harry K. Green for commissioner of revenue; J. Elwood Clements for sheriff, and Hugh Reid for trial justice. John Locke Green, Republican, was returned to office as treasurer.

In a joint statement last night, the new School Board, which will take office January 1, declared:

"Our first interest is the same as that of every other parent in Arlington — the improvement of our schools. We will need your help, and we want your suggestions and cooperation. We want to assure Arlington's teachers that their jobs are secure and that we will

State Firing Of 7 Upheld By Marshall

Papers That Cost Men Their Jobs Declared Secrets Of Other Agencies

(Marshall's Text, Page 13)

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Secretary Marshall stood pat yesterday on the firing—without trial—of seven State Department aides for "security" reasons.

Marshall said the papers that cost the men their jobs were the secrets of other agencies of the Government. "For this reason," he explained, "the department determined that it could not give the employes a full statement of charges. Without charges a true hearing was impossible."

When it can, the Secretary added, the department will give people written notice of the charges against them. He said this would be done when State Department secrets were the only ones in the case.

Arnold Attacks Action

Thurman Arnold, a former justice of the United States Court of Appeals here, has attacked the department for unfairness in firing the seven men without ever telling them what they were accused of, and in telling people who might give them jobs that they were doubtful "security risks."

"I still don't see why these men can't be allowed to resign," he said yesterday after Secretary Marshall made his statement.

Arnold's clients were among 10 persons fired soon after the State Department began its loyalty investigations last July. Marshall said at the time there was evidence some of the 10 had indirect contacts with foreign agents.

Arnold and his colleagues—former Interior Undersecretary Abe Fortas and former OPA Administrator Paul Porter—claim the record adds up to holding their clients disloyal, without filing charges or giving them a trial. They have asked for removal of this stigma by allowing the seven to quit, which the men are willing to do, if they can do so with clean records.

Loyalty Board Only Hope

Their only hope of being cleared now seems to be to appeal to the Loyalty Board named on Monday by President Truman—the makeup of which is still a secret.

"The purpose of such appeal," Marshall said yesterday, "will be to permit the employe affirmatively to establish his loyalty."

When asked, how can an employe show his loyalty when he does not know what his supposed disloyalty consists of, the Secretary referred to his formal statement. In that, he said, he had given the best answer possible.

Flies to London Nov. 20

Marshall Holds 'News' Parley But Brushes Off Most Queries

Secretary Marshall put on his five-star military manner yesterday at his first press conference since September 10.

About 100 reporters trooped to the State Department's auditorium hoping for some enlightenment on the European recovery program. The Secretary gave them brusque and uncommunicative answers on this and on almost every other subject that came up.

He showed annoyance when someone asked him about the suppressed report of Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer on China. He snapped back that he had already given his reasons for not publishing the report, and felt under no more obligation to release it than to make public a private talk with the President.

He announced he would leave on November 20 for the Foreign Ministers' Conference in London, flying in the President's plane, the Independence. He said he would do his best in London to find a sound basis of agreement with Russia on a German peace treaty.

Asked whether he was "optimistic, pessimistic or in-between" about the London prospects, he said he did not allow himself to be pessimistic when engaged in an operation; you do not win battles that way, he said.

He stone-walled courteously but coldly on every other subject raised. No, it was inadvisable to give piecemeal information now on the European recovery program. No, he did not know yet about any future help for China. No, he could not say what would be done about Italy's urgent request for more than 100 million dollars before the special session of Congress approves emergency aid.

A reporter asked him about the State Department's dismissal of a dozen employes as security risks. He feached over for a copy of a prepared statement, read it and declined to answer any questions on it.

Someone said "Thank you, Mr. Secretary," and the meeting was over.

Elizabeth Pleads For Aesthetic Values

London, Nov. 5 (AP).—Princess Elizabeth opened today the 194th session of the Royal Society of Arts with a plea for British rededication to aesthetic values.

The princess, who is president of the society, said the "spacious days" of leisurely artistic pursuit are gone "but we should be defeatist and unimaginative indeed if we concluded that because nearly everything we produce today must be severely practical, it must also be without taste or beauty."

House Relief Planners Would Build German Industrial Machinery

7 Questions Await Answers In Europe Relief Program

Here are seven major questions still unsettled as the Administration struggles to get the European recovery program ready for submission to Congress:

I—THE COST

The 16 western European nations have estimated their aggregate needs in the first year at between six and seven billion dollars from the United States, not counting emergency help for France and Italy this winter.

Administration officials, after weeks of studying and checking the figures, agree on this approximate amount. They agree, too, that any substantial cut in the amount will delay the process of getting western Europe back on its feet. The Herter Committee of Congress is expected to recommend a smaller sum; Senator Taft has said publicly that he thinks the first year's total should be between 4½ and 5 billion. All agree it is impossible to estimate accurately beyond the first year.

II—COMMODITIES OR DOLLARS?

The Europeans say that if American help is to be effective it should be in the form of dollars with which they can buy what they need. American official opinion tends to favor help in the form of actual commodities instead. The Administration is likely to propose a middle course to Congress: of sending the actual food, fuel and other consumable goods that can be supplied from the United States, and lending dollars for goods needed from outside American territory.

III—PURCHASES OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES

The United States cannot possibly supply all Europe's needs; the Europeans estimate that 50 per cent of their food and feeding stuffs for the next four years will have to come from Canada or Latin America. But Canada, Argentina and other potential suppliers need dollars with which to buy their own essential goods here. Shall the United States, then, provide dollars which Europe might spend in other markets?

The problem varies by areas, as follows: (1) Argentina is now charging almost $6 a bushel for wheat, as against the American price of about $3. Congress would never permit American funds to be spent at the Argentine price, and the Administration probably will not recommend it. (2) Eastern Europe has some supplies, like Polish coal, which western Europe needs. Should western Europe be allowed to trade American goods for supplies from the Soviet-dominated countries? The Administration probably will recommend that raw materials or finished goods from the United States should not be traded to eastern Europe in this way, but that the western Europeans should be free to proces with American materials and sell the product anywhere.

Report Is Rushed

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A 19-member special House committee yesterday agreed to recommend rebuilding of Germany's industrial machine, without return of her war potential, as part of a preliminary report on European aid.

The so-called Herter Foreign Economic Committee, rushing to completion its own recommendations for interim and Marshall Plan aid, did not reach the controversial administrative section of the report.

Proposals for an increase in German productive capacity were written into the preliminary draft as the key House group started revising, paragraph by paragraph, a rough-draft work sheet previously prepared by Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.), who led the bipartisan body to Europe.

Related to Recovery

Members argued that recovery of Europe was so tied up with restoration of Germany's ability to produce that this should be stressed in the report, together with safeguards against restoring her ability to make war.

A new line of speculation on legislative procedure opened meanwhile as Representative Jesse Wolcott (R., Mich.), chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, was asked to sit with the 19-man group.

Reports have been current that GOP leaders might ask Wolcott's Banking Committee, instead of the Foreign Affairs Committee, to handle the foreign aid program. Since Wolcott's committee would also be in charge of price legislation, such a shift might rule out any price action in the special session.

Following yesterday's meeting, members were reported in substantial agreement on factual conditions in France, Italy and Austria, as well as Germany.

Two Controversial Sections

No vote was reached on two sections of the report involving most controversy within the committee:

1. A recommendation that the United States not attempt to interfere in the internal politics of countries aided. Some members of the group want to tie on some political strings.

2. A provision that would mean GOP control of the new aid agency. This would require the President to appoint four of the directors from 10-man panels proposed by the House Speaker and the Senate president pro tem. He could name the other three direc-

6-Million Tax Demanded on Hughes Firm

Senator Declares Tool Company Loan Should Be Assessed

Post Reporter

A demand that the Hughes Tool Co., owned by Howard Hughes, millionaire plane designer, be assessed $5,919,921 additional taxes was made yesterday by Senator John Williams (R., Del.).

Williams presented his conclusions concerning the tax returns of the Hughes Tool Co. as the Senate War Investigating Committee resumed its inquiry into the wartime aviation contract for the Hughes flying boat and the FX-11 photo reconnaissance plane.

Members of the committee were agreed that the matter involved no charges of fraud, crime, violation of the law, or concealment on the part of Hughes or any of his companies.

Part of the demand was based on the fact that the Hughes Tool Co. loaned 10 million dollars to TWA, Hughes-controlled airline, from money which Williams said had been accumulated in reserves by the Hughes Tool Co.

Attorney Hits Committee

Williams contended that such a use of funds held as reserves called for further tax payments since the reserves did not go to building up the company.

Thomas A Slack of Houston, Tex., attorney for Hughes, promptly charged to reporters that the committee was trying to take over the functions of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Slack testified that the issue of some of the Hughes Tool Co. returns had been and was still before Internal Revenue officials in Houston, Tex., and that no determination had been made.

Williams' contention that the TWA loan did not come under provisions of the Internal Revenue

Warsaw Charges 'One of Embassies' Aided in Escape

Warsaw, Nov. 5 (AP).—The Polish government said tonight that flight of opposition leader Stanislaw Mikolajczyk had been "actively aided" by "one of the embassies" in Warsaw, and announced the arrest of three of seven members of the Peasant Leader's Party who fled at the same time.

A foreign ministry spokesman declined to name the embassy.

He said Mrs. Maria Hulewicz, Mikolojczyk's private secretary, Wincenty Bryja, treasurer of the Polish Peasant Party, and Mieczslaw Dabrowski were arrested after crossing the Czechoslovak frontier and now are in custody of Polish securtiy police.

The government charged Bryja attempted to flee Poland with "misappropriated" Polish Peasant Party funds.

A communique described Dabrowski as "a collaborator" of Mikolajczyk. It mad eno reference to the fate of the other Mikolajczyk followers who also fled Warsaw.

(When Mikolajczyk arived in London last Monday after two weeks of speculation in Poland and elsewhere concerning his whereabouts, it was announced that members of his escape group were Mrs. Hulewicz, Bryja and two of the party's members of Parliament, Stefan Korbowski and Kasimir Bajinski, and their wives.

(Asked then if his companions were safe, Mikolajczyk replied, "so far as I know, they are safe.")

The foreign ministry spokesman said Dabrowski attempted to aid the others' escape. Dabrowski apparently intended to return to Poland.

Foreign currency exceding one million zlotys (about $10,000) was found on the three arested persons, the communique said. It said "other persons were detained in this affair," but they were not identified.

Under the gimlet-eyed glare of Admiral George Dewey, the Navy is staging a "style show" this week.

Some proposed new uniforms—several of radical design—are on display in the august chambers of the Navy general board—founded almost a half century ago by the hero of Manila Bay.

Most of them were designed by the official Navy uniform board after months of study and research. They represent the Navy's second postwar attempt to alter its traditional mode. The first met with widespread disfavor in the fleet.

There's a green uniform with an Eisenhower-jacket suggested as a workday replacement for the traditional service blue worn here and on warship bridges. And proposed enlisted men's dress blues, with a collar-less, button-in-front, mess-jacket affair in lieu of the traditional jumper. A white jumper with blue collar would be worn under it.

Another is a khaki version of the present sailors' summer whites.

Dentist's Wife, Store Manager Shot to Death

Beckley, W. Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—The bodies of a furniture store sales manager, shot once through the temple, and a slender blonde wife of a Beckley dentist, shot twice in the head, were found today on a lonely mountain road by two passersby.

Acting Coroner Douglas Bryant identified the victims as E. Ray Bailey, manager of the Beckley Hardware & Supply Co.'s furniture department, and Mrs. K. K. Rand, comely mother of two children.

State Police Corpl. H. C. Fullmer reported the couple apparently were murdered.

The coroner said Bailey, about 50, was identified by papers in his pocket, while the identity of Mrs. Rand was established by persons who viewed the body. She was in her early 30's.

The bodies lay at the foot of a 20-foot embankment, and apparently they had been rolled down the declivity, officers related. There was no weapon nor any means of transportation in the neighborhood.

Virginia GOP Gains 2 Seats And Loses One

Richmond, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—Virginia's Republican Party, attempting a strong comeback in Tuesday's general elections, captured only one seat in the General Assembly—in the House of Delegates—incomplete but conclusive returns showed today.

Running up against one of the largest off-year elections in several years, the GOP gained two seats in the House but lost one in the Senate.

Despite a strong GOP campaign in southwest Virginia, Republicans lost to Democrats in three districts.

Lee County swung over to the Republican side in all county elections, but Republican C. S. Pendleton lost to Senator Floyd Robinette by a slim margin of 811 votes.

In the Smyth-Washington-Bristol District, former Democratic Delegate M. Warren was elected to the Senate over Republican Homer C. McFaddin.

In another close contest, Democrat Harry C. Stuart edged out Republican T. C. Bowen for the Senate, 8191 to 7798, in the Buchannan-Russell-Tazewell district.

Republican Senator Jacob A. Garber of the Twenty-fourth Senatorial District, was unseated by Raymond Guest, Democrat, by well over 1100 votes. However, Republican Senator Ted Dalton of Radford defeated Democrat Benjamin E. Chapman by the slim margin of 233 votes.

Senator Floyd S. Landreth of Galax, the second Republican member of the Senate, was not opposed in the general election.

In the House races, Republican J. Marion Smith of Lee County unseated Delegate A. P. Hamblen and I. C. Boyd, Democratic incumbent, lost to Republican Roger D. Fraley in Russell County.

Five other Republicans were elected to the House:

Bently Hite of Montgomery and Radford, W. C. Lambert of Shenandoah, Ralph L. Lincoln, incumbent of Smyth, B. P. Simpson of Carroll and R. Kyle Poole of Wythe.

Here is the picture of the legislative contests:

Eighteenth (Buchanan, Russell and Tazewell)—Senator Harry C. Stuart, Democrat, had polled a mere 93 more votes than Republican T. C. Bowen. One of the district's 60 precincts is still unreported.

Twenty-first (Franklin, Montgomery, Roanoke County and Radfod)—Republican Senator Ted Dalton was ahead by 233 votes over his Democratic opponent, Ben Chapman. One of the district's 72 precincts still is missing.

Twenty-fourth (Page, Harrisonburg, Rockingham, Rappahannock and Warren)—Democrat Raymond Guest unseated Republican Senator. Two precincts in Rappahannock County are missing, but Guest is leading 7815 to 6091.

Write-in Defeats Marion Incumbent

A write-in candidate, who never did get around to filing his petition of candidacy, unseated the incumbent commonwealth's attorney for Madison County in Tuesday's general elections.

In one of several surprises in county election results, Hugh R. Ross of Crigersville unseated Raymond L. Jackson, the only man on the ballot for the position.

Ross said he intended getting his paper in on time, but on the last day of filing he was attending a Lions convention in San Francisco.

Several incumbent county officers lost their jobs Tuesday, incomplete but conclusive returns showed today. However, the majority of officers held on to their positions.

A landslide for all GOP candidates was reported in Lee County.

Kentucky Election Cheers Democrats

McGrath Recalls Republican Boast As Clements Leads Dummit by 81,000

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Whatever its significance, the Kentucky election made the Democrats feel pretty good yesterday. This was noticeable at the White House, the Capitol and at Democratic national headquarters.

Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, new chairman of the Democratic National Committee, made no sweeping claims on the basis of his party's triumph in Kentucky after four years of Republican rule. He contented himself with recalling "Republican boasts that they would sweep the State."

"On October 15," said McGrath, "Senator Robert A. Taft predicted a Republican victory and said the election would 'reflect to a large degree which party will elect a President in 1948.'

"He (Taft) added:

"'As Kentucky goes, largely goes the Nation.'"

The Democratic victory was considerably greater than party leaders in Kentucky had expected. Whereas they would have been pleased had their candidate for Governor, Congressman Earle C. Clements, won by, say, 20,000 votes, late returns showed that Clements had beaten his Republican opponent, Eldon S. Dummit, by more than 81,000.

Carroll Reece, chairman of the Republican National Committee, made this statement about the Kentucky election:

"Naturally we would have been delighted if we had been able to retain the Governorship of Kentucky, which we won in a photo finish in 1943 at a time when the Democrats were enjoying one of their typical family rows.

"But the cold facts are that the Democrat registration in Kentucky exceeds the Republican by about 150,000 and that in two gubernatorial elections preceding 1943 the Democrats won by majorities of 117,083 in 1939 and 95,158 in 1935.

"Keeping these facts in mind, it will be realized that Kentucky Republicans made a showing yesterday which justifies real hopes that the electoral vote of that State may be cast for the Republican President to be elected in 1948."

Warning to GOP

Neutral political observers thought that the Kentucky outcome ought to be a warning to the Republicans that the 1948 presidential battle may be a hard and close one.

There have been five Republican Governors in Kentucky's history. No Republican Governor has ever been succeeded by a Republican. If the Republican candidate, Dummit, had won in the Blue Grass State Tuesday, it probably would have been taken as an indication that any GOP candidate could beat President Truman in '48.

Should the Republicans conclude now that they are in for a tough fight in '48, and should that be their feeling at convention time in June, the strategists behind the candidacy of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York will be gratified.

They are convinced that Dewey's greatest danger lies in a feeling among the delegates that they can win with anybody. Conversely, these strategists think that Dewey's best chance lies in the hope of a convention made of scared delegates.

That same argument, however, is invoked in the case of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. His supporters believe that the more frightened the delegates are of a Truman victory, the more likely they are to make Ike the Republican standard bearer.

Causes Speculation

The impressive Democratic victories Tuesday in municipal elections caused much speculation here. Why, is was asked, should the voters in Indiana throw out so many Republican mayors? Before the election, there were Democratic mayors in only 26 out of 102 Indiana cities and towns. After the election, there were 53 Democratic mayors.

Republican National Chairman Reece said the results in these elections were determined by local isues, and that "national issues or policies" were in no way involved.

Democratic spokesmen, however, suggested that high prices and labor's anger with the GOP had something to do with the ousting of so many Republican mayors. Asked how these mayors could be blamed for high prices, the Democrats said that the mere fact that they carried a Republican label was enough to defeat them.

Senator McGrath and the other practical politicians at Democratic headquarters weren't much concerned with the reasons for party victories in Kentucky, Indianapolis, Schenectady and elsewhere. They were interested in "organization."

These victories, they pointed out, meant more patronage, better political machinery, and a tonic for the party workers in advance of the battle of '48.

At the White House yesterday, Press Secretary Charles G. Ross adopted the British custom of understatement and admitted that he was not "unhappy" over Tuesday's elections.

Senator Haft, campaigning for the Republican nomination in Tulsa, Okla., said he could see no significance to the elections. He reaffirmed his belief that a Republican President would be elected in '48.

Robinson Is Elected San Francisco Mayor

San Francisco, Nov. 5 (AP).—San Francisco voters yesterday chose Superior Judge Elmer E. Robinson as their new mayor, approved $87,050,000 in city improvement bonds, and overwhelmingly authorized continued operation of the hill-climbing cable cars.

Robinson defeated fourth-term Congressman Franck R. Havenner and City Supervisor Chester R. MacPhee in the nonpartisan mayoralty election. Complete semiofficial count gave Robinson 116,937; Havenner, 101,408, and MacPhee, 60,508.

Pa. Democrats Elect 14 Out of 28 Mayors

Philadelphia, Nov. 5 (AP).—Democratic candidates swept to victory today in 14 of 28 Pennsylvania mayoralty races—a net gain of eight—and a party leader promptly clamied "a definite trend toward the Democrats again."

Republicans, matching the Democratic victory total, retained the chief offices in Harrisburg, the State capital, and Philadelphia, and won the only State-wide contest—for judge of the Superior Court.

Judge John S. Fine, Luzerne County Republican, was elected to a full 10-year term on the Superior Court. Returns from 8104 of the State's 8257 precincts gave him 1,551,226 votes to 1,254,226 for his Democratic opponent, Judge Ivan J. McKenrick of Cambria County.

Democrats retained five of six mayorships they formerly held, and upset eight Republican organizations and the State's only Socialist chief executive at Reading.

Republicans unseated the Democratic regime at Wilkesbarre

Jeffries Is Unseated As Mayor of Detroit

Detroit, Nov. 5 (AP).—Detroit faced a shakeup of its city officials today as the aftermath of the municipal election in which 58-year-old Eugene I. Van Antwerp, a city councilman, unseated Mayor Edward J. Jeffries.

The election outcome sent back to private life the first citizen in Detroit's history who served four full terms as top man in the City Hall. Jeffries ran second to Van Antwerp by about 19,000 votes.

The CIO, backing Jeffries for the first time in eight years, suffered its third successive mayoralty defeat. In Jeffries' two previous campaigns the CIO opposed him.

Complete unafficial returns gave Van Antwerp 224,229 votes and Jeffries 205,318.

Rural Judge John Stennis Wins Bilbo Seat in Mississippi

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 5 (AP).—John Cornelius Stennis, 46-year-old rural judge who calls himself a conservative, but who drew support of Mississippi liberals, tonight was assured of election as successor to the late Theodore Bilbo as United States Senator from Mississippi.

The tall, dour Presbyterian deacon announced shortly after 4:15 p. m. (CST) that he was satisfied his election was a certainty. In thanking the people of Mississippi, he commented that his campaign had been free on factionalism and partisanship.

There was no immediate comment from Congressman William Colmer (D., Miss.), or from erstwhile Bilbo-aide Forrest Jackson, who ran two and three in the race for Bilbo's unexpired term.

The scholarly, grey-haired jurist, who served 10 years on the bench without being reversed by the appellate courts of Mississippi, won over four Democrats and one Republican. His restrained campaign avoided the raw issue of "white supremacy" and stressed agricultural and industrial development of Mississippi.

With 1602 out of Mississippi's 1716 voting precincts reporting, Stennis had 50,525 votes. Second in the returns was labor-hated Representative Colmer, who campaigned in defense of the Taft-Hartley Act. He had 44,475 votes.

Slender, sharp-faced Jackson, who was counsel for Bilbo in his fight against charges of graft and political intimidation of Negroes, was third, with 41,691. Paul B. Johnson, jr., 31-year-old Marine cambot veteran, and son of the late Governor of Mississippi, had 26,522, placing just ahead of aging United States Representative John E. Rankin (D., Miss.), the red-baiting defender of "white supremacy," who suffered complete defeat outside his own bailiwick. Rankin, who saw Stennis lead in 4 of the 10 counties comprising his congressional district, trailed the Democratic candidates with 23,810.

A 77-year-old Republican, L. C. Collins, who ran for the exercise and who made no speeches, polled a corporal's guard of 508.

Colorless Candidate

Judge Stennis was called a most colorless candidate even by his friends.

Tall, erece, bespectacled, he won without hillbilly bands, showmanship, the usual "white supremacy" rantings which marked campaigns of "The Man" Bilbo.

Lean, square-jawed and with dark hair just beginning to turn iron-gray, Stennis speaks mildly, in a restrained manner, with a deep voice that frequently suggests the pulpit. He was reared in rural northeast Mississippi and served there as district attorney and later as circuit judge.

He ignored the challenges of opponents — especially Representative Rankin, who shouted defiance to "Negro Communists" and "Yankee meddlers" — and those who would have capitalized on Mississippi's resentment against Northern scrutiny of its race-relations. Instead he talked about agriculture, labor relations, and world affairs, said Stennis:

"The best possible insurance against 'isms is to educate and illuminate the minds of our boys and girls."

He is chairman of the board of deacons of the DeKalk Presbyterian Church. He is a Mason and a past president of the DeKalb Lions Club.

In 1928 he married Miss Coy Hines of New Albany, Miss. They have two children, John Hampton, 12, and Margaret Jane, 10.

work very closely with them to provide Arlington children with the best educational opportunities possible."

The delay in the count of votes in the Clarendon No. 1 Precinct was caused by the illness of two women clerks, Mrs. John O. Carpenter and Mrs. Ruth T. Smith, at about 4 a. m. yesterday.

When the two women left it was decided to discontinue the count and Mrs. Guy B. Furtner, chief election judge, took the ballots, both the counted and the uncounted, locked them in separate boxes and took them home.

To prevent a dispute, John W. Jackson, secretary of the electoral board, ordered that the count be started all over again yesterday at the Matthew Maury School.

Former Governor To Oppose Capper

Topeka, Kans., Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Former Kansas Gov. Andrew F. Schoeppel today announced his candidacy for the United States Senate opposing incumbent Senator Arthur Capper in the Republican primary next August.

Immediately Payne Ratner, also a former Governor and at one time considered a possible senatorial candidate in the coming race, threw his support to Capper. At the same time he hinted he might run against Senator Clyde Reed in 1950.

Coalition Candidates Win in Cook County, Ill.

Chicago, Nov. 5 (AP).—Twenty-one coalition ticket candidates for Cook County Superior Court judgeships were victorious in yesterday's election, in which voters also approved nine proposed bond issues covering an expenditures of 51 million dollars.

The majority of coalition candidates, including Republicans and Democrats, won by about 2 to 1 over the newly formed Progressive Party tickets.

A surprisingly large turnout of an estimated 650,000 voted on 30 million dollars in proposed bond issues for Chicago slum clearance and housing, and 21 million dollars for other civic projects.

The Agricultural Department's periodical, USDA, in reporting the retirement of Marcel L. F. Foubert, said that his views of the fleas' innards were used by departmental scientists in combatting diseases in a prized herd of government dairy cows. Foubert had worked more than 29 years for the department.

Anderson Foresees 4-Year Food Need

Aid to Europe to Require Full Production That Long, Agriculture Secretary Says

By the United Press

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson said last night that the Marshall Plan to aid Europe would keep U. S. farm production going at full blast for at least four more years.

He said it would put a "strain" on grain-producing areas, but, at the end of the four years, will pay off with larger self-supporting markets than could otherwise be expected.

Meanwhile, Chairman Charles Luckman of the President's Food Committee gave another indication that the shadow of the European food crisis will hang over United States food supplies for a long time.

In an interim report to the President, Luckman called the Chief Executive's "special attention" to the fact that the committee's whirlwind "consumer education" drive to save 100 million bushels of grain for Europe had been "planned to lay the foundation for a long-term generalized food conservation plan."

Luckman said that grain-consuming industries already had pledged to conserve 24 million bushels of grain during the 90-day drive this fall.

Luckman outlined for the President details of the committee's publicity campaign conducted through newspaper advertisements, radio announcements, newsreels, billboards, grocery store posters and from pulpits.

"From the pulpits the plight of the hungry is being preached by all denominations," he said. "Arrangements are now being made for an additional special day on which all churches will make a unified appeal to help feed the hungry of Europe."

Anderson told of the impending effect of the Marshall Plan upon United States agriculture in a speech before the twenty-fifth annual agricultural outlook conference. Under the plan, he said, "success of United States foreign policy will depend on United States farmers for at least four more years."

Vulnerable To U. S. Conditions

Anderson said the Marshall Plan, or any other "conceivable plan," left hungry Europe too vulnerable to United States weather conditions.

"This vulnerability is brought home by the present bad weather in our winter wheat area. So long as the grain producing areas of the United States stand as the chief bulwark against starvation in large areas of the world, this dangerous situation will continue. For the protection of the rest of the rest of the world, as well as our own good, we must aid in reestablishing other food producing areas of the world as rapidly as possible."

Anderson noted that some recent United States visitorsto Europe were surprised to see that no one seemed to be starving.

"I was in Europe briefly this summer but still had time to see evidence of hunger," he said.

Grain Exchanges Ask Price Probe

Offer to Show All Books to Congress; Blame Government Buying for Rise

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The three leading grain exchanges yesterday asked for a congressional investigation of their activities and charged that Government buying was responsible for present high prices.

The exchanges are now under investigation by the Justice Department on presidential charges of "gambling." They offered to make all their books and records available to a congressional committee.

Meanwhile, Tom Campbell, Montana wheat grower, told President Truman yesterday a "price ceiling" about 50 cents a bushel higher than the present market price should be placed on wheat. This, Campbell said, would stabilize the market and encourage farmers to release their holdings.

And the Nation's brewers were shown by an Internal Revenue Bureau report to have used nearly a third more wheat and wheat products in the month before they began their wheat-saving slowdown than in the previous month. However, their total grain consumption in September was below that in August because of decreased use of corn and barley.

Taft for Further Hearings

The plea of the grain exchanges for a congressional hearing was addressed to Senator Taft (R., Ohio) and Representative Wolcott (R., Mich.), heads of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report. It was made by J. O. McClintock, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, for his own organization and those at Minneapolis and Kansas City.

Taft joint chairman of the committee, told the Associated Press at Tulsa, Okla., he had received the request and would recommend "further hearings." He said he had called the committe together November 14, three days before Congress meets in special session.

In their letter to the committee, the exchanges contended that:

1. Recent soaring grain prices were caused by the Administration's "extraordinary and ever-increasing purchases of grain and flour for export."

Charges Uncertainty on Aim

2. The Government didn't know if the 750 million bushels of grain scheduled for export this crop year would be too much or too little.

3. Plans were being considered to buy "far more" grain than 750 million bushels.

A Department of Agriculture spokesman conceded that the Government's export program for foreign aid had contributed to the high cost of grain.

"There's no question," he told The Washington Post, "that the export of several hundred million bushels of grain has had a direct effect on the market. But I believe the effect has been exaggerated."

He pointed out that either the current high domestic demand for all grains or the export program alone could have been handled without difficulty. Both together, he said, have resulted in the present condition.

Without the export program, he suggested, it might have been necessary for the Government to buy some commodities as a price-supporting move, even in the face of the domestic demand.

Calls Reports Baseless

This spokesman said there was "no basis" for "all these reports of uncertainty in the trade."

"Our annual allocations are made and reported months in advance," he said, "and purchases are announced the day they are made. There can be no uncertainty about those.

"The only possible uncertainty could be whether we were going to increase purchases materially next year."

The Government, he added, was now "in pretty good position" and "way ahead" on its grain purchases. This meant, he explained, that "we are not over the barrel and can buy when it will have the least effect on the market."

In their letter to the committee, the exchanges said that if the plans they charged to buy more than 570 million bushels this crop year were carried out they would "materially further raise the price of grain" and result in domestic shortage.

"We are convinced," they declared, "that only a committee of Congress can and will go to the root of these causes which have produced the current rise in living costs and which alarm every citizen, particularly the American housewife."

McClintock told the Associated Press he had "no official notice" of the Justice Department's investigation of the exchanges and "no official contact" with any member of the department.

Campbell made his wheat price ceiling suggestion to the President during a visit to the White House yesterday. He told reporters afterward he also told Mr. Truman he felt taxes should be continued at present levels.

Campbell acknowledged he hadn't yet sold 610,000 bushels of his own wheat "because I expect to get a higher price." He suggested about $3.50 a bushel as the proper figure and said farmers could get the equivalent of that now by feeding grain to hogs.

U. S. and Britain Oppose Canadian Air Route Plan

Geneva, Switzerland, Nov. 5 (AP). Canada proposed today a multilateral commercial aviation agreement embracing certain routes to be flown, as well as general principles.

The United States and Britain expressed opposition.

Canadian delegate John Baldwin made the proposal at a 30-nation civil aviation conference in the Palace of Nations, declaring "unless we are all prepared to accept some kind of compromise, there is little hope of agreement here."

Assistant Secretary of State Garrison Norton of the United States, and George Cribbet of Britain argued for a global pact covering general principles, but leaving the question of routes to negotiations among individual nations.

PALESTINE JEWS OFFER CHOLERA AID; EGYPT IGNORES SERUM PROPOSAL

by GENE CURRIVAN
Special to The New York Times.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 28.—The Hebrew University has offered to send tens of thousands of units of serum to Egypt to help stem that Moslem country's spread of cholera, which took 3,000 lives last week. Jewish doctors were offered by Hadassah but Egypt has not accepted.

The offer to send serum and even to increase the staff to manufacture millions of units was sent three weeks ago but it remains unanswered. The offer to send doctors, which was made by Dr. Judah L. Magnes, president of the university, and one of the Hadassah heads, was declined with thanks. Despite this the offers still stand, it was announced today at the Jewish Agency for Palestine by Gershon Hirsch, the agency's spokesman. He said:

"As soon as it became known that the cholera epidemic was serious the university called in the head of the bacteriological section and asked what amount of serum he could produce in a short period. He said that in a week or two his department could manufacture tens of thousands of units, but if millions were needed he would need four to six weeks to engage an additional staff."

Mr. Hirsch said the university informed the Egyptian Consul of the offer and asked for the exact type of cholera in Egypt, so the proper serum could be made. The consul asked that all this be put in writing. This was done, but the letter was not answered, Mr. Hirsch said.

Reports from Cairo said there had been 9,000 cases last week and that the prospects of checking the epidemic were less encouraging. Many villages refused serum and these areas were isolated by guards.

Although no cases have been reported in Palestine, the whole country has become cholera conscious and is spreading educational pamphlets, listing all precautionary measures that should be taken.

CAIRO, Egypt, Oct. 28 (Reuters).—Another 408 persons died of cholera in Egypt in the past twenty-four hours and 880 new cases were reported. Deaths since the epidemic began Sept. 3 were put officially at 6,132 today.

About 1,500 cholera suspects in Dekheila camp near Alexandria today attacked camp guards in an effort to escape when they heard that fifteen persons in the camp had the disease. Fifteen soldiers and many inmates were injured.

Anxiety was aroused by the disclosure that in Alexandria, where the cholera epidemic was not thought to have struck so severely, there were 1,500 suspected cases.

Okla. Governor Stresses Food Saving Effect

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Oklahoma City, Okla., Nov. 5.—The present food conservation program will play as important a role in providing grain for next year's foreign relief as it will this year, Gov. Roy Turner of Oklahoma predicts.

That is because it will teach the people the importance to continued world peace of this country's fulfilling its commitments under the proposed stopgap relief program and under the Marshall Plan.

Oklahoma's vast wheat fields, already unplanted long past normal seeding dates, still are being denied the rains essential to growing wheat.

Grain men freely predict next year's winter wheat crop for the country as a whole may fall below a billion bushels—may even drop 500 million bushels under this year's record of 1400 million.

Such a drop would be equal to the total top goal set by the Government for shipment to food-deficit countries overseas this year.

It might mean that next year's exports of wheat must be cut to half or less of what President Truman set as the minimum goal this year.

Turner sees an offset to this gloomy situation in the propaganda program of President Truman's Citizens Food Committee.

Barley May Replace Wheat

"It is emphasizing," he said, "particularly to the farmer, the duty this country has in rebuilding Europe." There is no question, Turner added, that next year's wheat prospects are "not favorable, to say the least." Butdue to the demand for food abroad he predicts the wheat farmer will turn to substitutes nearly as good as wheat. "If the wheat fails, there will be a lot of barley planted next spring," he said.

Turner started off the food conservation program here today with a large meeting of civic leaders, grain and cattlemen, women's clubs, fraternal groups, churches, labor leaders and others. A first-hand report on conditions in Europe was given by Senator Elmer Thomas, Representative Mike Monroney, and others just returned from abroad.

Meatless and eggless and poultryless days will be a constant reminder, Turner believes, of the necessity for continued large production to permit carrying out the foreign program.

Turner believes the influence the Citizen's Food Committee program will have in encouraging production of foodstuffs next year to be as important as the actual conservation of food this year.

Would Put Beer in Bottles

The Governor, as everyone else here, forecasts a large drop in meat production, due to the lack of wheat pasturage. Instead of grain in place of pasturage, he believes that farmers, impressed by the dire need for grain for export, will feed their cattle on roughage. Fortunately the hay crops, particularly alfalfa, are bountiful this year.

Another important factor in conserving grain is the high prices of such feeds. There is no profit in feeding grain at present quotations to livestock.

Another shortage, evident even in this oil country, is that of petroleum products. Development of new oil fields is far above recent years. But the full benefit from this new production cannot be secured because of lack of pipe and machinery supplies.

On the other hand, Turner does not criticize the recent export of oil pipe to the Near East. "If we would use bottles instead of cans for our beer, we could quickly make up for all the pipe exported," he commented.

Clothing Drive To Start Here For Europeans

A community clothing drive to aid Europeans will be started here tomorrow by the Washington Area Relief Mobilization, headed by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, former American Minister to Norway.

Residen's will be asked to bring usable clothing to Protestant churches, Jewish synagogues and firehouses during the period from tomorrow to November 16, Mrs. J. W. McIlhenny, publicity chairman, announced last night.

The drive was initiated by the Washington Federation of Churches, the Washington Council of Church Women and the Jewish Community Council. Garments gathered at the churches will be shipped to the Church World Service at Windsor, Md., where they will be mended, sorted and shipped to 16 countries of Europe.

Clothing collected at the Jewish synagogues and temples will be forwarded to the American joint distribution committee, Supply for Overseas Survivors, Jacob M. Kammen, executive secretary of the Jewish Community Council, said.

Officials of the WARM asked residents to search trunks and attics for overcoats, sweaters, mittens, gloves, discarded men's felt hats (which can be converted into children's slippers) and bathrobes. They suggested placing a cake of soap in the pockets of garments since "it means a great deal to those overseas and so little to us."

Meanwhile support grew for the "We Care" Thanksgiving Day dinner program suggested by the Washington Ethical Society. The group urged District residents to serve economical foods instead of the traditional festive meals and send the saving overseas in the form of food packages.

Gov. Dewey Sees No Choice Other Than Aid to Europe

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey declared tonight "we have only one choice" on the European aid question "and that is wisely to aid those who stand with us in the world in the hope that they will rise again as bulwarks of the institution of human freedom."

In his first public pronouncement on the Marshall Plan, the titular Republican Party leader and prominent possibility for the 1948 GOP presidential nomination gave full indorsement to an aid-to-Europe program, asserting "we have no choice."

But, interspersing his prepared speech with sharp criticism of the Roosevelt and Truman Administrations on foreign as well as domestic affairs, Dewey emphasized he believed reconstruction aid should be advanced "for business purposes" and administered on a businesslike basis.

"It is time," he said, "we got businessmen into a business job."

He underlined this principle by delivering the talk before the thirtieth annual banquet of Forbes Magazine, held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel to honor 50 men selected as the Nation's foremost business leaders.

The Governor also aimed many salvos at the Russians, charging they "are counting confidently on our failure" and "they believe that their great Allies, misery and starvation, will bring Communist revolutions the world over."

Dewey gave this outline of his views on the mechanics of the aid program:

Help sent to avert starvation should not take the form of loans. But recipient government "should not be allowed to sell the food and then use the proceeds for further deficit financing. These proceeds should be used to develop the productive resources of the nations so as more speedily to make them self-supporting."

The second type of aid, for reconstruction purposes, should be straight loans. "But it should be made for business purposes and not left, as during the last 2½ years, in the hands of social planners who do not know a loom from a corn husker."

To make certain, "for once, that the aid we provide is not wasted," a special authority should be created to supervise the entire program. The authority should be bipartisan with a chairman "of outstanding ability."

Finally, Congress should adopt a bipartisan policy statement making it clear "that we will not suddenly or capriciously abandon those in other countries who risk their lives to uphold the principles of freedom in the face of the menace of a police state."

The Governor, asserting it was "the greatest of good fortune" that the Nation has a Republican Congress, said he was sure the Legislature would bring forward a sound aid program.

"It may well eventuate," he added, "that the election of a Republican Congress last year not only saved the domestic affairs of the United States, but it may well also save the peace of the world."

He charged the United States price inflation was "a result of the economic ignorance of the national administration" and commented that, "in foreign affairs, from Teheran through Yalta to Potsdam and since, we have seen out Government giving aid and comfort to the Communist conquest."

German Plants Linked to Aid

tors of the seven-man agency on his own.

The initial draft of the report concludes that the United States should not attempt to dictate political conditions in return for its aid.

Conflict Noted

Members noted this was in some conflict with another policy statement in the Herter draft saying free enterprise should be encouraged as opposed to socialization.

Objections to the GOP-controlled administrative setup proposed by Herter stemmed mostly from Democrats. They protested the new appointive procedure is "unconstitutional" since it narrows the President's right to pick and choose whom he pleases.

Anticipating constitutional objections Herter last night appeared ready to abandon his proposal that the House Speaker and Senate President submit 10 names, from which the President would have to choose four of the directors. Instead, he wants to require consultation by the President with House and Senate presiding officers before any appointments are made.

The proposed seven-man European reconstruction corporation would run the largest part of the aid program—food, fuel and fertilizer distribution. Other raw materials and goods required would be financed by the Export-Import Bank, probably through increased capitalization. The World Bank would finance capital goods needed to put Europe on a long-range producing footing.

The 19-man group expects to complete its revision of the preliminary report today or tomorrow. Findinks will embrace interim aid, probably specifying the amount, as well as long-range (Marshall Plan) assistance. Later the committee probably will prepare separate detailed reports on each country, and a final separate report on the Marshall Plan.

The report is no texpected to be unanimous. A small minority of members is reportedly opposed to any aid at all. In two long closed sessions, members read through the Herter draft but barely got started on the final revision. Herter told reporters, however, that "everybody was very cooperative."

Miamian, 82, Asks Annulment Frmo Wife, 22

Miami, Fla., Nov. 5 (AP).—An 82-year-old Miamian who testified he married an attractive 22-year-old Maryland girl after a taxi and plane ride to Georgia, is seeking to have his month-old marriage annulled through two court suits.

Frank Maxa, sr., testified before County Judge W. F. Blanton yesterday that he "didn't remember" marrying Hazel Rutherford of Aberdeen, Md., on September 19 in Lawrenceville, Ga.

Maxa filed suit to declare himself incompetent before an annulment suit is heard next month in circuit court.

Questioned about the weekend trip to Georgia during which Maxa testified he couldn't remember getting married, he said:

"I remember getting in to an automobile and going for a long ride. I think that I also was in an airplane."

Maxa, who with his 60-year-old son, Frank Maxa, jr., is said to have extensive real estate holdings in Maryland, told the court he had been drinking on the night of the "proposal."

European Aid Queries Wait

countries have supplies of their own which could sell for dollars or use within the 16-nation area for their own recovery. This is especially true of their colonial dependencies, like the Dutch East Indies and the British, French and Belgian colonies in Afriica. Should they be allowed to sell these supplies for dollars, thus cutting down the amount of dollar help needed from Congress, or should they be required to use such supplies within the 16-nation area?

If the latter course is followed, the 16 nations would have to set up some kind of clearing house to make their currencies interchangeable, and this probably would need American help.

IV—STABILIZATION FUND

The Europeans have estimated that they would need between two and three billion dollars as a stabilization fund to strengthen their currencies.

Administration opinion has now swung in favor of such a fund, on condition that the Europeans first take energetic measures of tax collecting, budget balancing and retrenchment to put their financial houses in order.

American gold might be loaned to support such a fund, just as American silver was loaned to India and Australia under lend-lease during the war. This idea, originally broached during last Summer's discussions in Paris, was misunderstood by Foreign Secretary Bevin of Great Britain and led to his remark about the "redistribution of American gold.

The World Bank's Role

The World Bank, with half a billion dollars in its till and eight billion dollars of potential lending power, was set up to lend money for reconstruction and development. The Europeans have estimated that about three billion dollars of their needs in the next four years will be for reconstruction goods which the Bank could finance.

The question at issue is whether all Europe's requests for reconstruction equipment, such as generators or steel furnaces, should be left to the World Bank to finance as straight loans. A World Bank official said this week that the Bank would need additional capital to carry such a bog load. The added capital could not come from the 46 member countries, since some of them are openly opposed to the "Marshall Plan," might come instead from a Congressional authorization to let the wholly-American Reconstruction Finance Coproation buy about a billion dollars worth of World Bank bonds.

VI—SUPERVISION

The European nations will get large receipts in their local currencies from selling American food, fuel, and raw materials to their own people. Administration and congressional leaders agree that such funds shall be set aside rather than go into general circulation. The Treasury, worried about inflation in Europe, would like them set aside in a single account and blocked altogether; other officials would like these local currencies to be used for wages and other costs of recovery projects. But who shall control their use?

If these funds are to be used at all, officials here believe Europeans must control them in accordance with bilateral agreements made in advance between the United States and each recipient country. Control might also be exercised by a sixteen-nation committee with an American member but without an American veto.

Many members of the Harriman Committee, however, and influential members of Congress, are reported to favor a board of trustees, three American and two European, to decide how these funds are to be spent. The Europeans say flatly that not one of their sixteen governments ever would accept such American control, which would simply confirm Soviet propaganda about American "domination."

VII—MANAGEMENT

The executive departments and leading members of Congress agree that a brand-new agency must be set up to administer the program. One plan is for a new Government agency, with sweeping powers to procure, manufacture, transport and allocate the supplies needed. Another plan is for an independent corporation with an administrator named by the President but with members appointed in consultation with the Speaker of the House and the President Pro Tem of the Senate.

The proposed executive agency would resemble the Lend-Lease Administration and the War Production Board; the proposed corporation would resemble the RFC or the Export-Import Bank. In either case, the State Department would have only an advisory role.

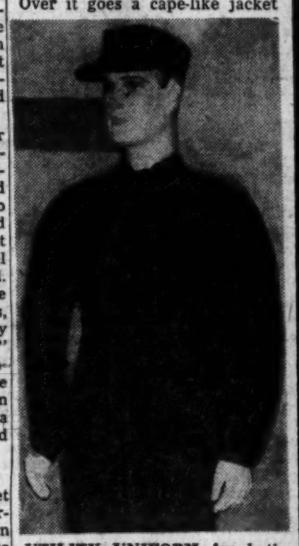
New Navy Garb Considered . . .

DRESS BLUES for the enlisted men would look like this if proposed uniform is adopted. In place of form-fitting blue jumper, the uniform has a white, button-in-front with the usual sailor collar in blue. Over it goes a cape-like jacket

NAVY KHAKI would come into being like this. The proposed new model is similar to the present whites, but is khaki in hue



UTILITY UNIFORM for both officers and men, features dark-blue trousers, blue wool shirt, floppy engineer's type cap with insignia

WORKDAY UNIFORM for Navy officers seems at first to be a natty, conventional number for a Marine Corps general. It's green, as the present naval fliers garb, and has an Eisenhower-type jacket

Suffrage Discussion Will Be Broadcast

The home rule and reorganization plan for Washington proposed last Sunday by a House District Subcommittee will be the subject of a round-table discussion over radio Station WRC at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Participants will be Philip Graham, publisher of The Washington Post; Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.), head of the subcommittee; Harry Wender, chairman of the D. C. Board of Recreation, and Rufus Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association. Moderator will be David Brinkley, radio commentator.

board's council table. Admiral Dewey's official portrait seems to frown down on such moderistic ideas.

No new Wave uniforms are on display. Capt. Joy Bright Hancock, Wave director, told the board yesterdal that only minor modifications in the present women's uniform are desired. That "new look" with the long skirts has been rejected by Wave chiefs.

Secretary of the Navy John Sullivan threw the controversial problem of a uniform revision into the laps of the Navy's "elder statesmen," as the general board is known. He acted after two years consideration by regular Navy agencies failed to produce an agreement, though all admit a change is needed.

The board is now holding hearings to get the opinions of enlisted men, Waves, and junior officers as well as top-ranking admirals on suggested new designs. What they recommend—if Sullivan approves—will be the fashion in the Navy for some years to come.

A parade of witnesses and hundreds of visitors have dropped into the general board chambers this week to view the new designs.

Adm. John H. Towers, chairman of the General Board, emphasized that all the uniforms on display are simply proposals.

Towers, the Navy's pioneer flier, disclosed, however, that a majority of those answering questionnaires favor adoption of a green uniform similar to that now worn by naval aviators for general workday use aboard surface ships and at shore stations. Opinion differs as to whether it should have a blouse, as at present, or a jacket similar to that worn by Marines.

Adoption of the aviator's greens is a proposal of the uniform board. The plan to substitute a battle-jacket for the blouse was submitted by Adm. C. M. Cooke's Far Eastern Fleet.

Most officers heard thus far, including younger men, Towers said, favor restoration of the full dress blue uniform—a cutaway—as part of an officers' required ensemble.

All of the proposed new enlisted men's uniforms drastically alter the traditional bell-bottom trousers. They provide a fly, pockets in the pants—a long-felt need—and eliminate the buttons up the side.

Still another proposal favored by many is the elimination of the bulky officers' overcoat in favor of a dressy blue raincoat with rank insignia on the shoulders, Admiral Towers said.

One new design for a work uniform provides a blue cap for officers and men very similar to the green headgear worn by all services in the Pacific theater during the war. It is a floppy affair with a visor, made entirely of cloth. Dark blue trousers and a heavy blue shirt would be worn with it.

Just after the close of the war, the Navy Uniform Board proposed several radical changes in uniform, mostly aimed at making enlisted men's attire more closely resemble officers.

Bluejackets almost uniformly turned thumbs down on the new designs, holding them impracticable to keep serviceable aboard ship or too closely resembling "gas-station attendants."

Harriman Group's Aid Report Ready

Committee Approves Text Unanimously; Marshall Hopes to Be Set by Monday

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Secretary Harriman's 19-man committee of business, professional and labor leaders yesterday unanimously approved the text of a 325-page report on what America can "safely and wisely" do to help Europe recover.

The report is expected to reach President Truman's desk by tomorrow and be released for Sunday's newspapers. Because of the non-partisan nature of the Harriman committee and the individual stature of its members, the report will carry weight with Congress in the special session that starts November 17.

There will be no minority report, it was learned last night. Although the committee members came from the ranks of banking, industry, labor unions and farm groups, they were able to agree on a single document without making their report a hodgepodge of compromises.

Report in 2 Volumes

The report is in two volumes—one a general survey of the problem, with recommendations, and the other a series of technical reports by subcommittees that studied the capacity of various industries to meet Europe's needs.

Some of the recommendations were said to stray far beyond President Truman's original assignment to the committee to determine what could "safely and wisely" be done. Many members of the committee felt strongly that the United States should keep strict control over the funds Europe would get from the sale of American supplies.

Some also were said to have insisted that no part of American help should go indirectly to the Soviet-dominated nations of eastern Europe. On these points and others the committee's ideas may conflict with the program the Administration intends to submit to the congressional committees next week.

Secretary Marshall said yesterday that he hoped to have a fairly specific Administration program by Monday. Day-and-night discussion of the problem, he said, had boiled down to a limited number of critical decisions. On some of them he said he had not yet made up his own mind.

All Decisions Not Made

The Secretary firmly refused to say even what these issues were. From other sources it was clear that at least seven major questions are still undecided or in disagreement between the executvie departments, the Harriman committee and the Herter committee on Capitol Hill.

These seven are: (1) How much will the program cost in its first year? (2) Shall American help be in commodities or dollars or both? (3) Will Europe be free to spend part of the funds outside the United States? (4) Will the United States contribute, in dollars or gold or both, toward a European stabilization fund? (5) What will the World Bank's role be? (6) How will Europe's spending of American funds be controlled and supervised, and (7) what kind of agency will administer the program?

In addition, there is an eighth question: How much can American farms and factories supply, and what Government controls will be needed? This, however, is expected to be answered conclusively by the Harriman committee. On all the others, notably the third, sixth and seventh, there probably will be sharp political contorversy in Congress.

Army Rations To Be Shown At Convention

Some good reasons why our Army's "chow" is the best in the world will be on display from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. today at the Hotel Statler.

The display, open to the public, is offered in connection with the meeting of more than 300 scientists and other representatives of government, educational institutions and industry at the Statler today.

Those attending the meeting will work on a program designed to intensify work now being done by the three groups in the field of combat food research for the United States armed services.

The meeting is under the auspices of the Food and Container Institute of the Chicago Quartermaster Corps, which is a section of the Quartermaster Research and Development Branch here. Col. Charles S. Lawrence is commanding officer of the Quartermaster Food and Container Institute.

Basic research is done at extensive laboratories in Chicago and at various universities. Corporations complete the picture by doing production and packaging research necessary to put the rations out on a large scale.

The public display will include exhibits by manufacturing groups showing Army product development and research recommendations.

A dedication dinner will be held tonight at the Statler. Speakers will be Clarence Francis, General Foods Board chairman, who has served on many Government food committees, and Franklin B. Snyder, president of Northwestern University.

Partisan Reported Fleeing Hungary

Another Foe Of Communism Flees Hungary

By Seymour Freidin

Vienna, Nov. 5.—Zoltan Pfeiffer, leader of the Hungarian Independence Party and long-time foe of Communists, was reported today to have fled Budapest and to have arrived in Vienna.

Pfeiffer, who was facing loss of his parliamentary immunity, was reported to be en route to Vienna by the American-sponsored German language newspaper Weiner Kurier. Hungarian press sources here charged tonight that Pfeiffer left Budapest with the "help of Americans." Official American quarters declined to comment.

Pfeiffer had been reported missing from parliament in Budapest yesterday.

Pfeiffer's flight removed nearly all the opposition leadership from Hungary.

Beginning in June with the resignation of Prime Minister Ferenc Nagy while abroad and the escape of Deszo Sulyok, head of Hungary's Freedom Party, together with other opposition officials, the critics of Hungary's government are now reduced to Istzan Barankovits and his People's Democratic Party.

Deputy Premier Matyos Rakosi, Communist leader, has consistently threatened to outlaw Pfeiffer and his party. Pfeiffer was accused two days ago by the public prosecutor in Budapest of having released a former Hungarian S. S. officer during his tenure as minister of justice.

His departure from Budapest coincided with a wave of arrests by Hungarian security forces against an alleged espionage ring. In addition, Jack Guinn, Associated Press correspondent in Budapest, was expelled. Guinn arrived last night in Vienna and his wife and two children came here today after receiving a 24-hour ultimatum to leave Hungary.

Pfeiffer's party which has 40 seats will probably be allocated to the government coalition parties whose candidates in the districts where Pfeiffer had his principal strength ran second.

Hunger, Disease Kill High-Minded Japanese Judge

Tokyo, Nov. 5 (AP).—District Judge Yoshitada Yamaguchi considered himself a man of high principles—so high he could not patronize the black market.

The judge resolved to support his family on his salary and his legal rations. He died of tuberculosis and malnutrition.

The story of the struggle between principle and an empty stomach emerged today when his diary was published in the newspapers.

He subsisted on thin soup, giving the legal rations to his family. He even refused food sent from a farming area by his father-in-law, turning it over to his family.

To his wife's plea that they sell some personal belongings and buy food on the black market, he replied:

"How can one who judges others do any black marketing?"

Byrnes Says Russia Holds 828,000 Japs

Winston-Salem, N. C., Nov. 5 (AP).—Charging that Russia has violated "a solemn pledge," James F. Byrnes said tonight it is our duty to demand that Marshal Stalin "Immediately return" an estimated 828,000 Japanese prisoners.

"Our good faith is involved," declared the former Secretary of State, because we took the initiative in the Potsdam declaration that promised Japanese troops a safe return home to encourage them to surrender.

Russia adhered to this, and is bound by the pledge, but I instead of letting these prisoners of war go home, "they took hundreds of thousands of them to Russia . . . Every day the Soviets hold them as prisoners, it is an inexcusable violation of a solemn pledge," asserted Byrnes.

"Must Let World Know"

"We must let the world know that this violation . . . is not condoned by the United States," he counseled in speech prepared for the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Under the Geneva convention, governments should return prisoners as soon as possible after the fighting. But even now "the ugly truth is that prisoners of war are being held in Allied countries in order to force them to work," Byrnes said.

France, Britain and Belgium are moving to get their German prisoners home, Byrnes said, but he was strongly critical of the length of time taken. Britain's program calls for return of all by October, 1948, Belgium's by January 1, 1948, and France must return 30,000 a month to have them out by the end of 1948, but "they are not doing that now," Byrnes said.

But the Russians, by their own figure of 10,000 a month, will take more than seven years to release their German prisoners if this rate is followed, the speaker asserted. In April they estimated they were holding 890,532, he said.

MacArthur Pleas Vain

The Japanese situation is "an entirely different question," Byrnes contended. General MacArthur has made frequent demands for the return of these prisoners without success, he said.

A member of MacArthur's staff estimated that in October the number still held in Russia was 761,000 and in Manchuria 67,000, Byrnes reported.

He urged anew that the United States insist on holding a peace conference of all the wartime Allies early in 1948 to start drafting a peace treaty for Germany, completing it without Russia's adherence if she refuses to go along.

He proposed that conference decisions be made by a two-thirds vote of the members if necessary, and that "we should do everything in our power to induce the Soviet government to go along . . . if they refuse, then the other allied nations should go ahead without them," he advocated.

"This would not be making a separate peace," Byrnes declared. "It would simply be saying that no one nation could veto peace on earth."

Byrnes said that it "does not necessarily follow" that all Allied troops would withdraw from Germany, in event of a separate treaty, while Soviet troops remained permanently in eastern Germany.

He said that if the Soviets fail to agree to a peace settlement and also to the 40-year treaty which was urged by the United States to prevent German rearmament, the other three big powers should then sign such a pact to prevent a German resurgence. He added:

"The Soviets would then know that there would be a fulfillment of the pledge I made at Stuttgart that so long as other occupation troops were in Germany, the troops of the United States would be there."

Byrnes also told the churchmen that he is "deeply concerned with the state of mind at times bordering on hysteria" that ascribes to Russia all the ills and errors resulting from two world wars.

"No country has suffered more from the wars of our generation than have the Russian people," he said, "and suffering people are not always reasonable people."

Byrnes, at the outset, said that a bipartisan foreign policy demands that members of both political parties are be kept fully informed before policies are determind. He added that "there can be no truly American policy unless the American people are kept informed."

Reds Accuse Byrnes Of 'Warmongering'

Moscow, Nov. 5 (AP).—Both the government newspaper Izvestia and the Communist organ Pravda published five-column articles today accusing former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes of "warmongering."

"If the conditions of the United States are accepted—good; if not—war," is the way the Russian publications summarized Byrnes' position.

Tatarescu Loses In Romanian Vote

Bucharest, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—The Communist-dominated Romanian parliament passed a vote of no confidence tonight, 187 to 5, against Foreign Minister Gheorghe Tatarescu, who had been under leftist attack for two days.

Communist Deputy Constantin Parvulescu implied in a speech Monday that Tatarescu's pro-government National Liberal Party created disharmony in the "democratic" parliament by defending the interests of landowners.

Yesterday the Communists started attacking Tatarescu personally, charging in their newspapers that unidentified foreign powers obtained state secrets through the foreign ministry.

The parliamentary motion against Tatarescu was introduced by the foreign relations committee.

The "grave facts" disclosed against Tatarescu in the treason trial of oposition leader Juliu Maniu, now drawing to a close, were cited in the motion.

The attack on Tatarescu came as defense attorneys made their final arguments in the trial of Maniu and 18 codefendants.

Treaties Are Safe

British Aim At Balkans Airing in U.N.

London, Nov. 5 (AP).—A government spokesman said in the House of Lords tonight that Britain was considering haling former Nazi satellite nations in the Balkans before the United Nations on charges of violating their peace treaties by their treatment of anti-Communist parties.

Lord Jowitt, the spokesman, rejected a proposal by Lord Vansittart, however, that Britain repudiate the peace treaties, particularly with Bulgaria, Romania and Hungary.

Lord Vansittart charged that the three Balkan nations in particular were guilty of "the persistent violation" of obligations "to secure the enjoyment of human rights and of the fundamental freedoms, including freedom of expression, of press and publication, of religious worship, of ploitical opinion and of public meeting."

Alluding to the execution of the Bulgarian Peasant Party Leader Nikola Petkov, Vansittart said "Petkov holds a high place in the interminable array of ghosts who were the victims of sheer evil and those ghosts will not be allayed."

Lord Jowitt, the lord chancellor, said the government opposed repuddiation of the treaties because they contained clauses limiting the size of armed forces and protecting British interests. Britain's ratification of the pacts, he added, did not condone government actions in those countries, but unabled the British government to maintain diplomatic representation in the countries "to report what is going on, to make representations and to see if we can put things right."

This debate was on the eve of the four-power deputy foreign ministers meeting, opening tomorrow. The task of finding agreement on the future of Austria and Germany was made more difficult by an atmosphere of pessimism at the rift between Russia and her war-time allies of the west.

Preliminary to the council of foreign ministers' opening session November 26, the United States, France, Britain and Russia appeared split wide open on what steps should be taken to give Austria and Germany a place in Europe's reconstruction.

Unofficially but usually reliable informants said the United States had already drafted a plan, to be submitted in event of a council deadlock. The plan would virtually amount to a peace pact with that part of Germany outside the Russian zone of occupation.

Bunch Death Probe Halted

mistreatment or negligence. Since the coroner's jury verdict of "accidental" death, the FBI has conducted an inquiry for the U. S. attorney's office. It was at the request of District Attorney George Morris Fay that the coroner's office reconvened the jury yesterday. Fay said that a public hearing by the coroner's jury would be in this instance more "desirable" than a necessarily secret hearing before a grand jury.

Counsel Fitzpatrick, in an hour-long attack on the legality of yesterday's hearing, charged it was illegal on two other counts.

Fitzpatrick contended that the original coroner's jury had not been sworn in properly, in the presence of the dead man's body. Murphy insisted that there was no ground for this argument, since he had sworn in the jury on August 4, the day Bunch died, and then had set the inquest for August 13. The official transcript of the original hearing, which stated that the jury had been sworn in August 13, was an error, Murphy said.

The deputy coroner also refused to accept Fitzpatrick's charge that the jury was an illegal one, in that one of its members was 68 years old. Murphy declared that while civil court juries set an age limit of 65 for its members, there was no such limit for a coroner's jury.

Assistant United States Attorney John Fihelly urged Fitzpatrick to waive his rights on the question of illegality in order that the hearing of witnesses might proceed. Fitzpatrick, however, demanded a ruling on the question from the deputy coroner presiding over the inquest.

Group Yugoslavia Barred Reports

Congressmen Warned Their Plane Might Be Shot Down, Chairman Rooney Declares

London, Nov. 5 (AP).—Representative John J. Rooney (D., N. Y.), chairman of a House Appropriations special subcommittee on State Department expenditures, reported today on his group's European tour without being able to get into Yugoslavia.

There was no explanation of the Yugoslav refusal. Belgrade just declined to reply. The Soviet foreign ministry had said it did not consider Russia a country which could be investigated by a Congressional committee.

Rooney declared the committee felt it had the right to visit the embassy, since the group is charged with supervising House appropriations for State Department expenditures.

Other members of the committee include Representatives Gary (D., Va.) and O'Brien (D., Ill.). Tyler Thompson, chief of the State Department's planning division, is traveling with them.

Rooney said U. S. military officials warned their plane might be shot down if they failed to get visas.

The party is traveling in a special Army plane.

The committee made stops in London, Dublin, Berlin, Frankfurt, the Ruhr, Rome, Athens, Ankara, Trieste, Vienna, Geneva and Paris before returning here for consultations with British officials.

In addition to revealing failure of the committee to obtain permission to enter Yugoslavia, Rooney made these statements on the European political situation:

In Hungary the Communists would get less than 5 per cent of the vote "if there were a free election."

He received information that the preesent Hungarian secret police "are the same as those who served under the Nazis, but that under their new masters—the Communists—are doing a much more superior job of instilling terror into everybody in Hungary."

In Italy the average person "seems very friendly to the United States, but I am disturbed about the two million members of the Communist Party who, unfortunately, do not understand that their leaders—as elsewhere—are thoroughly opposed to freedom of religions and to any farmer."

In Austria the Communists have made no headway because the Austrian people "ar far too intelligent to fall for their wiles." But "there's the same danger in Austria as in Hungary that by force of arms a small minority might be able to take over if the United States and Britain withdraw their troops."

He urged immediate increased appropriations to expand the State Department's information program and "The Voice of America" overseas broadcasts.

Rooney said Europeans must be convinced that American aid "is not in the nature of alms or charity, but is an expenditure in the interests of the American people themselves so as to prevent another war."

He criticized some Congressmen who were on committees visiting Europe, and said they approached the problem "with the idea of criticizing the Administration, rather than fairly assessing what is going on and giving due credit to the sincere Americans who serve in the State Department and Army."

He attacked Representative Taber (R., N. Y.), chairman of the full House Appropriations Committee, as "the most expertly misinformed man in Congress when he says he was unable to find any starving people over here."

The committee conferred with Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, and Rooney said his impression after the meeting was that the success of the coming meeting of the Four-Power Foreign ministers on Germany and Austria "is in the lap of the gods."

"Confident that our class will advance to positions of responsibility in the business world, we devote our last lesson to the 'Symptoms and care of ulcers'!"

Testimony Is Completed in Rowe Case

Baltimore, Nov. 5 (AP).—Testimony was completed today in the $250,000 civil suit brought by Mrs. Melissa Rowe, 56, of Brentwood, Md., described in Federal Court as "a meddlesome mother."

Mrs. Rowe claims she was "railpital for 26 days in 1943 as a mental patient, "to get her out of the way."

The defense rested after former Trial Magistrate Walter L. Green of Hyattsville took the stand to deny he signed commitment papers because he was "infatuated" with Mrs. Rowe's thrice-married daughter, Mrs. Florence Pearson, 35, blue-eyed blonde.

"Absolutely unfounded," Green described Msr. Rowe's charge that he "used his official powers" to "get her out of the way."

Green said "I did not" have any social or personal contact with Florence, then Mrs. John C. Guise. "I've been married 20 years," he testified.

Mrs. Rowe, called by her Attorney James Laughlin, as a rebuttal witness, then testified that "in the summer of 1941 I asked Judge Green about his association with my daughter that her husband told me about" and "he did not deny it."

Green, she said, "told me I was a meddlesome mother." On September 29, 1941, she said, "he advised me to get out of Prince Georges County, that I had made a nuisance of myself and no one in the county wanted me."

Other witnesses have characterized Mrs. Rowe as a letter-writing citizen known for her "extravagant charges and threats" against public figures.

Mrs. Rowe contends she was "deprived of her civil rights" when "railroaded" to Spring Grove March 8, 1943, as a result of a "conspiracy" by relatives and friends. She was released April 3, 1943.

Mrs. Rowe is the wife of Leslie Rowe, 3402 Varnum st., Brentwood, Md., for 30 years a Government clerk in the Navy Department, Washington, and now employed at the Woodward & Lothrop department store, Washington.

The case is expected to go to the all-male jury sometime tomorrow. H. Mason Welch of Washington, Assistant Attorney General J. Edgar Harvey and C. L. Aiello are among counsel for the defense; Laughlin and Charles H. Flasphaler for Mrs. Rowe.

Six Millions Additional Tax Demanded on Hughes Firm

Act relating to reserve funds of corporations recalled the stormy earlier hearings when Hughes charged that Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), chairman of the full committee, had attempted to "blackmail" him into merging TWA with Pan-American.

Williams and Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) took issue with a sworn statement by Hughes that "neither my company or I made a profit as the result of the war."

His examination of the books of the Hughes Tool Co. showed that a profit had been made, Williams declared.

Slack and Noah Deitrich, Hughes Tool Co. executive, testified that Hughes' statement was exactly correct. They said that the over-all picture is that Hughes did not make profits on Government contracts during the war.

Deitrich told reporters later that in the five years preceding 1942 turns of the California plane builder with the assistance of the Hughes Tool Co., originally formed to manufacture oil well drilling machinery, had realized some 21 million dollars in profits.

In the next five years, including 1946, Deitrich said, the Hughes Tool Co. made some 18 million dollars.

Williams said that he had made a careful examination of the company records and actual tax recalculations.

Carmine Bellino, certified public account, formerly employed by the FBI.

Bellino, sworn as a witness, attempted to give the technical and detailed reasons for the conclusions concerning Hughes' taxes.

Senator Carl A. Hatch (D., Mex.) interjected that it was all a very "confusing and highly technical matter" for tax experts to consider.

"I don't think this is the proper place or forum to try the tax difficulties of Mr. Hughes," Hatch commented.

"I agree with you," Williams interjected.

He indicated the question had been brought up because of Hughes' testimony about that neither he nor his companies had made a profit because of the war.

Restaurant Inspection Started in Frederick

Frederick, Md., Nov. 5.—A sanitary survey of restaurants and all places in which food is served for public consumption in Frederick city and county got under way today by D. W. Taylor, a member of the United States Public Health Service. The inspector will visit every eating place in this area and examine the premises and facilities for handling, refrigerating and serving of food. Taylor's report will be submitted to the Mayor and Board of Aldermen and to the Board of County Commissioners.

Bosses Wait on Table

Dublin, Erie, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Executives of the fashionable Hibernian Hotel waited on table and washed dishes in the hotel's restaurant today following a strike by the staff in protest against the hiring of French help. Yesterday three French waiters, six French chefs and a French manager were hired.

Anti-Klan Movie Approved in Part For Va. Showing

Richmond, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—Distributors of the motion picture, "The Burning Cross," and the Virginia Board of Motion Picture Censors reached an agreement today on all but one scene of the film, according to Robert T. Barton, counsel for the distributors.

The film was viewed today after a ruling by Judge Julien Gunn of City Circuit Court that the movie may be shown in Virginia after certain deletions are made. Judge Gunn did not specify what portions of the film should be deleted.

The court ruling came after the board twice had viewed the film and had banned it on the ground that it "may incite to crime."

Barton had contended that the film was a strong protest against the Ku Klux Klan.

Beaten, Robbed, Trucker Reports

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 5 (AP).—Price Reid, 37-year-old truck drvier of Harrisonburg, Va., said today he was beaten and robbed by two young men who forced him to stop with a road block, then threatened to kill him.

Reid, driver for the Mason-Dixon Trucking Co., told Deputy Sheriff Leister Isanogle the two men parked truck across the road. When he got out to investigate, one man pulled the trigger of a gun, but it failed to go off.

Reid said the two men then beat him with the gun butt, and took his wallet. The driver was treated for face and head injuries at a hospital here.

Not to Be Believed

Plymouth, Ind. (U.P.).—The clock atop the Marshall County court house is not only "four-faced" it is also a four-timer. An official check showed that each face has a different time. Only the south face is correct.

Woman Juror Law Constitutional, Md. Judge Holds

Baltimore, Nov. 5 (AP).—Maryland's women's jury service law was declared constitutional today by Circuit Judge J. Abner Sayler in a lower-court opinion.

"There is nothing in the Bill of Rights of Maryland or in the State Constitution to prohibit women from serving on juries in Maryland," Judge Sayler ruled in Criminal Court.

He said the new statute, passed last winter by the General Assembly, is not invalidated by the fact that 12 counties are exempted.

The law provides for women jurors only in Baltimore City and 11 counties.

The test came on a motion by attorney Paul B. Mules, representing Irvin D. Limper, charged with robbing a newspaper carrier. Mules argued that jury service is properly the subject fo State-wide legislation.

Women began serving on juries this fall. Lawyers indicated the Maryland Court of Appeals eventually may have to rule on the constitutional question.

Demoralized Firemen

The manner in which criticisms of Fire Chief Clement Murphy have been presented to the District Commissioners by the Corporation Counsel's office is, to say the least, decidedly peculiar. Apparently the investigators scrupulously avoided consulting Chief Murphy during their probe, and he has not been given an opportunity to answer the complaint originally made by one of his subordinates that he has demoralized the Fire Department. Certainly this is strange procedure. Charges of maladministration and personal misconduct, such as the report allegedly contains, are matters of the utmost seriousness. The suspicion arises that the investigation was deliberately one-sided so as to give Mr. Murphy a chance to discredit it and thus remove the pressure for action by the Commissioners.

We hope that this is not the case. Basic justice dictates that Mr. Murphy should be allowed to defend himself. At the same time, if the criticisms of his tenure are enough to warrant an investigation, they also warrant a thorough airing by the Commissioners. An interesting commentary on the report is that many of the charges allegedly concern Mr. Murphy's actions before he became chief. If that is true, then the report is an indictment of the Commissioners themselves for appointing him to office. That is all the more reason why a whitewash cannot be tolerated. Experience of the way in which the Commissioners have blithely disregarded abuses by the Police Department leaves us none too sanguine as to the action that may be expected. We hope that public insistence in this case will be intense enough to remind them forcefully of their responsibility.

Rankin's Defeat

We extend our congratulations to the voters of Mississippi whose renunciation of Bilboism is apparent in the early returns from Tuesday's election. At this writing, the issue of the contest for the senatorial seat, made vacant by Mr. Bilbo's death, is not clear, but it is certain that the place will not be filled by Representative Rankin. It is our view, expressed more than once on this page, that Mr. Rankin would be even more dangerous as a member of the Senate than Bilbo was, precisely because of Mr. Rankin's greater sincerity. Mr. Rankin, in our opinion, honestly believes what Mr. Bilbo merely pretended to believe, that the Protestant white civilization of the Southern United States is in grievous and imminent danger of destruction at the hands of Communists, Negroes, Yankees, Jews, Jesuits and Northern Americans of Latin or Slavic ancestry. In other words, the difference between Mr. Bilbo and Mr. Rankin was the difference between a demagogue and a fanatic.

We have never supposed that either Mr. Bilbo or Mr. Rankin represented the views of the generality of Mississippians. What we feared was that the general scramble for Mr. Bilbo's seat might divide the votes of a reasonable and intelligent majority in a way that would permit Mr. Rankin, supported by the fearful and unenlightened voters of the back-country, to win by a plurality. It appears, however, that Mr. Rankin ran last in a field of five. Good!

Geneva Trade Pact

The multilateral trade agreement concluded at Geneva by 23 countries has been hailed by President Truman as a "landmark in the history of international economic relations." Its signing brings to an end negotiations rightly described as the most far-reaching ever undertaken in the history of world trade. The agreement embraces 123 separate trade pacts covering 19 customs areas and accounting for more than half the world's trade. Many thousands of tariff schedules are affected by the concessions granted.

Since no details concerning the nature of the concessions have as yet been made public, judgment must be suspended concerning the probable effect of the agreements on the movement of goods until experts have had an opportunity to study the major schedules. However, it is generally admitted that the immediate effect of lower trade barriers will not be impressive in view of the disturbed conditions prevailing throughout the world and the scarcity of goods and of dollars with which to pay for goods. Moreover, it is known that the over-all general trade agreement worked out at Geneva contains an escape clause permitting countries to withdraw or modify trade concessions if an increase of imports threatens serious injury to a domestic industry. While this same general agreement looks toward ultimate abolition of quantitative import restrictions, it also provides for exceptions to enable hard-pressed countries to cope with the extraordinary difficulties of the postwar period. Consequently the trade pacts negotiated at Geneva are more in the nature of a promise to work for attainment of the goal of multilateral trading than an assurance of present relief from hampering trade restrictions.

The general agreement has been described by former Undersecretary of State Clayton as "a step toward fulfillment of the obligation to negotiate with other member countries for reciprocal reduction of trade barriers." The specific agreements to effect reductions are necessarily provisional. But they encourage us to hope that, when the present crisis is over, expansion of world trade will be facilitated by the progressive removal of hampering barriers made necessary by the world-wide deficiency of resources with which to pay for imports and produce for export.

Marshall's Neglect

The newspaper correspondents, who have not seen hide or hair of Secretary Marshall since September 10, drew a blank at his press conference yesterday. He added to the general perturbation about the new discipline he has imposed on the State Department in the name of security. He had only a stiff and formal confidence to express on the coming meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers. On the Marshall Plan, which predominated in the concern of his hearers, he had virtually nothing to impart except the flat statement that on Monday it would be ready for submission to the committees of Congress. There was no illumination about the issues involved, not even an itemized list of the questions outstanding.

To one question Mr. Marshall was simply anticlimactic. It had to do with the Wedemeyer report on China. The effort is being made, if Senator Vandenberg is any guide, to include China in the aid bill, even though Secretary Marshall has insisted that the Marshall Plan should more properly be called the European Recovery Program. A month ago the President had referred the correspondents to Mr. Marshall for a statement on the Wedemeyer report. When reminded of this, the Secretary said that ne had already spoken his piece, and it was recalled that the piece simply put off the inquiry.

That the eager beavers of the press were chagrined is to put it mildly. After seven weeks, the last of which Undersecretary Lovett called "Hell Week," the scribes had the right to expect some light or leading on our public affairs. They know, if the Secretary doesn't, the concrete questions that the people are asking about the plan for which the legislators are being brought together six weeks ahead of schedule. Why should China be kept out of the Marshall Plan? What is the answer to the plaint that Europe is not working? To be sure, Secretary Marshall has used the public platform a couple of times within the last two months, but he has dealt in generalities. And the need is to inform the press as a basic preliminary of informing the public on the development of the Marshall Plan. Background, the newspapermen call it. But there has been so little background about the Marshall Plan that the debate will begin with the people ill-prepared for it.

In our view Secretary Marshall since he undertook his initiative on June 5 has missed a great opportunity to arouse interest in his magnificent concept. The people have been left completely out of touch with the Administration's ideas and policies. There was all the more need to be a source of education because the recess of Congress had cut off discussion. In these circumstances Secretary Hughes' model should have been adopted. Let us repeat a quotation from Clinton W. Gilbert in The Mirrors of Washington on Mr. Hughes:

> He talks to the country daily. He takes the people into his confidence, telling all that can be told and as soon as it can be told. He makes foreign relations hold front pages with the Stillman divorce case. He makes no step without carrying the country with him. He comes as near conducting a daily referendum on what we shall do for our "interests" as in a country so big as ours can be done; and that is democratic control of foreign relations . . .

This should have been Secretary Marshall's aim. But he has not even given the correspondents the material with which to compete with the designers of the New Look! The reason for his taciturnity lies, we suppose, in his military training. Working always in private, inured to silence about the big problems he has been given to solve, he has brought the habit to the State Department, and gives the impression that the prying press is simply an intrusion on his time. This is not a statesmanlike attitude.

The Secretary's neglect to busy the domestic mind with his "stroke of the moment" of June 5 is nothing short of a tragedy. On June 5 he said that "an essential part of any successful action on the part of the United States is an understanding on the part of the people of America of the character of the problem and the remedies to be applied." The Secretary has fallen down on this requirement.

No Partisan Issue

Senator Vandenberg's "fervent prayer that we may ever strive for an unpartisan American foreign policy—not Republican, not Democratic, but American"—is a salutary prelude to the extra session of Congress that will assemble in less than two weeks for the special purpose of buttressing our foreign policy. The Senator's address at the University of Michigan was a wholehearted indorsement of the foreign policy the Administration is following, a policy which he has helped greatly to shape. We do not see how there can be any reasonable dissent from this view on the part of either Democrats or Republicans. For, as the Michigander said, "We cannot run away from the responsibilities of leadership unless we are ready to accept the dreadful price of its loss."

That price is clearly understood, we suspect, by the great majority of Americans. Nevertheless, Senator Vandenberg has helped to sharpen it in the minds of his listeners and readers. The peace to which we are solemnly pledged and for which we have already paid so high a price cannot possibly be established securely unless we help war-ravaged countries to regain their economic and political stability. We live in a world in which subtle forms of aggression are a daily experience. While resisting every reasonable effort to make peace on a live-and-let-live basis, Moscow continues to encourage subversive infiltration of other countries and the establishment, wherever its followers can seize control, of police states that destroy freedom.

In these circumstances there can be no rational differences between Democrats and Republicans as to what our policy must be. The only logical division that we can see is that between those who are determined to stand for the type of world in which freedom, justice and peace can exist and those who are indifferent to the spread of the police-state tyranny and its fake ideology.

Divorce Jungle

Senator Arthur Capper, armed with new data on the legal labyrinth that the 48 States have set up in their zeal to keep the American family intact, is renewing his fight for his 24-year-old bill for a constitutional amendment to permit Congress to pass a uniform marriage and divorce law. Senator Pat McCarran, of the State that boasts Reno, proposes a more moderate approach. He would have Congress pass a law requiring all States to honor "honestly" obtained divorces issued in other States. He would require certain qualifications of residence and good faith to make a divorce "honest"—and thus valid all over the Nation. But those who hop about the country for quick action in the easy divorce States, or who frame up their decrees, would remain in the same dubious states of matrimony, bigamy or adultery in which they now find themselves in various parts of the country.

What effect this division of the divorced into sheep and goats would have is hard to predict. It would, of course, clear up the legal complications of those who obtain "honest" divorces in one State and later move to another. But the affairs of the "dishonestly" divorced would remain muddled—which might be what they deserve except that the courts could still be plagued with their legal problems and their innocent children would continue to be labeled illegitimate in some States, and possibly lose their inheritances and rights of support. Also it is unlikely that the award of "honest" divorces would materially cut down the traffic to the divorce mills.

However Senator McCarran's proposal would be at least a step toward clearing up the divorce legal maze and it might set some States to reexamining and modernizing their divorce laws. In view of past congressional apathy toward a uniform law, there are many who believe that divorce-law reform can only be a step-by-step process. The American Bar Association has proposed as a first step a program to work for uniform residence requirements for divorce. Either this or Senator McCarran's proposal seems the only immediate approach possible. But eventually a uniform marriage and divorce law is the only answer, and there should be no further delay in getting started the long process of giving Congress power by constitutional amendment to exercise such power. For as distances constantly grow less in this country, as population increasingly shifts over the 48 States, as sectionalism and its particular social attitudes become less pronounced, marital and family relations become a problem that transcends State boundaries.

THE SWALLOWS

Harbingers of evening, more than the evening star,
Silent or twittering, diving, swooping, flying,
From branch to branch, out of the violet twilight and back,
While the afterglow fades and the heart goes crying, crying.

Falling and rising, fluttering like innumerable scraps
Of burnt paper, black snowflakes as the dusk thickens,
Countless myriads, tumultuous small acrobats in the sky,
Dispassionate, heedlessly darting, while the pulse quickens.

But it need not quicken, for already the darkness is here,
And the voice that would have called will not be calling;
Starred night, and the birds fast like dark fruit in the boughs,
And silence except for the sound of a single leaf falling.

John G. Winant

One does not have to accept de mortuis nil nisi bonum as a maxim of wisdom to find your November 5 remarks on John G. Winant not merely ungracious but strangely imperceptive.

He was no administrator, you say. Granted he was not. It is demonstrable, I believe, that the relatively few Presidents who are securely part of our national tradition were poor administrators. This does not imply that poor administration is a virtue. It does indicate that the valuable significance of a man may outweigh administrative deficiencies.

Winant was inarticulate, you say. Facility does not often come from the depths, and halting speech may be—as it was in Winant—part of an inner struggle to convey a groping vision with sincerity.

Winant was not among the thinkers. How many statesmen or nonstatesmen are? But there was something authentically American in his effort to give political expression to spiritual striving. It is that which made the British people find in Winant strength and succor at a time when they were called upon to summon all their spiritual resources against overwhelming material power.

At a decisive hour in the history of civilization he proved once more the truth of Emerson's insight, that "the last lesson of life, the choral song which rises from all elements and all angels, is a voluntary obedience, a necessitated freedom . . . Honor and fortune exist to him who always recognizes the neighborhood of the great, always feels himself in the presence of high causes."

"Ignorance Of History"

In his letter of November 3, Gen. Amos A. Fries, regional director, Friends of the Public Schools of America, writes approvingly of the October 27 Washington Post editorial on "Ignorance of History," and he says in the course of his letter:

"To learn simply as a parrot the name Magna Carta, and that it was a great English document, means nothing. However, it does mean something when it is known that on June 15, 1215, the lords and yeomen of England surrounded Charles I and forced him to sign that document which is, in English, the great charter—the great charter of freedom from kingly intolerance."

Would it not mean even more, for example, to know that it was not Charles I at all, but King John, and that the revolution in which Charles Stuart was involved happened a mere four centuries, and more, after the business at Runnymede?

Perhaps General Fries' error, surely a mere slip of the pen, should point up some kind of a moral.

And does it not seem odd that the pundit who wrote the original piece did not edit the letter ever so slightly to save the General this embarrassment?

SPENCER HOLLAND.
Washington.

Editor's Note: Our face is as red as General Fries', since we blundered in not catching his slip of the pen.

"Impact Of Foreign Aid"

Your important November 3 editorial, "Impact of Foreign Aid," concludes with the observation: "If a tax-reduction bill were to be enacted, there would be a different and a sadder sequel." The tax reduction that is under discussion among Republican leaders, following the lines of their party pledge, seems to contemplate a figure of between three billion and four billion dollars or thereabout.

This is substantially the estimated cost of an increase in our permanent annual appropriations for universal military training, according to Hanson W. Baldwin, New York Times military commentator and a recognized expert, in his article in the July Reader's Digest, entitled "Why I Oppose Peacetime Conscription." Mr. Baldwin says: "The great cost of peacetime conscription, estimated at anywhere between three billion and five billion dollars annually, would divert funds from far more important military requirements, and the energies of 130,000 to 150,000 men of the Regulars would have to be devoted exclusively to the cyclic basic training of mass reserves."

Mr. Baldwin's estimate covers, of course, in addition to the $1,750,000,000 of the Compton Report the additional expenditures necessary to complete the program of training in the second half-year or its equivalent.

Are you now in favor of crossing off the list this unnecessary expenditure in the interest of foreign aid?

Domestic Enemies

One aspect of the current campaign which is undermining the civil liberties of the American people has not been touched on by any of the statements that have come to my attention. Our civil liberties are guaranteed under the Bill of Rights of our Constitution. Every public official is under oath to defend the Constitution against all enemies, both foreign and domestic. The systematic destruction of those liberties is being accomplished by the very individuals who have sworn to defend the Constitution. Every act of omission or commission, therefore, constituted two crimes (1) an act of aggression against the Constitution, and (2) treasonable perjury in violation of the oath of office.

Does anyone doubt that the J. Parnell Thomas and John E. Rankin Committee is subversive of the civil liberties of American citizens, which every member of Congress is sworn to defend? By outright, deliberate, knowing denial of the legal safeguards established by the Constitution, and by fear and intimidation, they destroy the fundamental securities of America.

Our domestic enemies are more dangerous to our liberties than foreign enemies. Without wishing to indulge in heroics, but as a matter of cold, hard fact, I consider that each of these subversive individuals is an enemy of the Constitution, and I have a personal responsibility to fight them by every practicable means. It should be possible to invoke the Constitution and the law of the land against those public servants who violate their oaths of office and destroy the Constitution.

Hollywood Hearings

A lengthy and very ably written letter in your issue of October 30, from Prof. Stephen K. Bailey of Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., seems to me to indicate very clearly that that writer is on the wrong track.

Professor Bailey assumes that the House Committee on Un-American Activities is hounding certain individuals because they are Communists, which he very properly argues they have a perfect right to be. The facts are that that is not the object of these investigations at all. What the committee is trying to do is to bring to the light the fact that certain individuals are Communists and for their own ulterior purpose make the most strenuous efforts to conceal that fact from their employers and from the general public.

ALBERT D. RUST.
Mount Rainier, Md.

The Communist Party has been a legal and active organization in these United States for sometime. Why, at this particular time, and for no reason which is apparent, is it a crime to belong to the Communist Party? If these people who obviously do belong to the Communist Party, do actually receive "orders" from Moscow, and in addition do actually plan to "overthrow the United States by force," I believe that I, as well as all the rest of the non-Communists of this country, have a right to know exactly what real evidence we have to that effect.

MYRTLE MOORE FARROW.
Brighton, Mass.

The Un-American Activities Committee has been living up to its name, in that it has arrogated to its members the right to act as a super grand jury, with alleged power to set up a standard by which every citizen may be subject to be judged as to every activity in which he engages; with the difference that while grand jury investigations are secret, this super grand jury seems to feed upon publicity. To those citizens whose sense of justice, decency and right was offended by the activities of the "Knights of the Fiery Cross," the un-American activities of the Un-American Activities Committee must be even a greater offense.

ARTHUR LOCKE KING.
Georgetown, S. C.

I address myself to The Washington Post editorials, "As Others See Us," of October 29, and Political Affiliations," of October 31.

The Washington Post, which never uttered a single editorial "word of caution" regarding potential threats to "civil rights" and "freedom of expression" when the Ku Klux Klan and the Columbians were the targets of investigation and prosecution, repeats its past performance of manifesting a great and tender concern over "threats" to these rights when Communists and "fellow travelers" happen to be the targets of such actions.

If you hold communism to be a "political belief," then what do you hold Klanism and Columbianism to be? If you hold that Communists should not be molested in holding and advocating their "political beliefs," then why don't you also hold that Klansmen and Columbians are equally entitled to be unmolested in holding and advocating their "political beliefs?"

F. L. FREEMAN.
Coral Hills, Md.

I have been a faithful reader of your paper and proud of it, until now. I refer to your shocking stand on the un-American investigation.

These Communists (maybe yes, maybe no—according to their own phrasing) remind us of the question not too far back—"Shall we fortify Guam?" We didn't take any safety measures because Japan might get mad or have her feelings hurt.

Let's not examine our house for termites, either. Let's wait until the walls crumble and then call the exterminator. We might hurt their feelings.

Soft Citizen Danger

By Malvina Lindsay

Training For Girls

SOME WHO FEAR this Republic is in more danger of becoming a soft, lazy girl than a soft fat boy among nations have raised the issue as to whether a universal-training program should include women.

As battle lines form for the approaching combat over training program legislation, two questions increasingly concern students of the defense problem. One is: "What could the glorified American girl, if trained for nothing but the pursuit of glamour, contribute in time of national emergency?" The other: "Could a nation under great military or economic stress carry a load of idle, unskilled, helpless women?"

Since in any future war the battlefield would be brought to the home, the need for trained and disciplined women would be almost as great as that for trained and disciplined men. In fact, the President's Universal Training Advisory Commission, in recommending training for boys 18 years old and over, pointed out that atomic war "had eliminated all former concepts of zones of safety in any attack and added to the need for trained men in every city and town."

But what about women trained in nursing, medicine, first aid, mass feeding, chemistry, mob psychology, mechanics, carpentry, fire fighting? Or, better still, in peacetime services and responsibilities?

THE PRESIDENT'S commission skirted around the controversial girl-training issue by saying that "for practical reasons" it had excluded training for women "at this stage." It suggested that the possibility of including women should be studied by a commission set up to administer the general program.

But several women's national organizations are starting now to study the matter. Even those undecided or lukewarm on the entire training program recognize that if a plan limited to boys is adopted, it may have some undesirable by-products. One of these might be the resentment of young men at being, as some of them express it, "robbed" of a year of their lives, while girls go on to school or get ahead in the business and professional world.

Another might be to further the tendency of American women to advance beyond men in formal education (more girls than boys now are graduated from high school) and to become the bluestockings of the Nation. More serious would be the encouragement of many women in idleness and public irresponsibility, also in their preoccupation with dress, cosmetics, social trivia—which widely advertised activities have given this country a world-wide reputation for materialism and softness.

Some women's groups also are still disturbed by the failure of their sex to enlist in the women's armed services to the extent to which they were needed in the last war, and by the failure of many women of leisure to engage in volunteer work. Even some of those opposing compulsory training programs of any kind realize that American girls as well as boys need a dramatic awakening to their citizenship responsibilities.

YET ANY proposal for training girls would probably cause a widespread outcry of "Hitlerism"! and "totalitarianism"!—as did the wartime proposal to conscript women. Some opponents of such action argue that at least keeping women free of the blighting effects of military regimentation would help preserve American intellectual and political freedom. They believe it possible by voluntary methods to induce more girls to train to be useful workers and conscientious citizens.

Most Americans agree that a voluntary program would be more in their tradition. But nothing definite on a national coordinated scale has been done along this line, or seems likely to be done. Moreover, with the tense state of the world, the emotional mood of the people, and the increasing talk of "making America strong," it seems likely some kind of compulsory program for training youth to meets its national responsibilities will ultimately be adopted.

Those interested in making this something more realistic and constructive than goose stepping or its equivalent know they cannot fight something with nothing, that they will have to present positive and practical alternatives. If the program is to be adapted to an atomic era it will need to mobilize the capabilities and, above all, the mentalities of both women and men.

Price Of Sugar

In your issue of October 31 it is stated with regard to lifting of price controls on sugar: "Dealers warned that if a run developed as result of heavy buying by housewives (presumably before lifting), grocers would have no alternative but to increase prices for a short period until the market settled back to normal."

The necessity of increasing the price must be as embarrassing for dealers and grocers as it is for us who buy. The predicament is unfortunate. If we can relieve the situation by offering to pay less for the sugar, we shall all be glad to do so. But perhaps the gentlemen are unduly gloomy.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The War Psychosis

THOUGH everywhere in Europe everyone talks about war, what virtually all Europeans are preparing for is not to fight a war but how as individuals, communities, and nations they can sit out a war if it comes.

LIPPMANN

The Germans are a special and very complicated case which I shall try to deal with in another article. I have some doubts about Tito. For though I did not go to Yugoslavia, I found that even in eastern Europe among his Slav brothers he was regarded with some misgiving—much as the German general staff regarded Mussolini—as capable of forcing their hand in adventures of his own. But elsewhere, in the nations which would really matter in case of war, the conviction has settled in that they can do nothing about it, that they will be ruined if it occurs, that they cannot afford to arm, that in a conflict between Russian infantry and the American air forces, it is not worth arming, and that—like the Swedes, the Swiss, and the Irish in the last war—their paramount interest is to survive, whatever their sympathies.

GRADUALLY it became clear to me that we, and we alone, can allay their fears, and the panic which is a principal obstacle to the making of peace and to the whole project of European recovery. In Paris I had several talks with men whom I do not feel free to identify except to say that what they think is highly significant. One of them assured me that in the event of war France would be in the "American camp." A little later, the conversation having veered to another subject, he told me that France could not endure another war and that her only aim would have to be to insure the physical survival of the population and of her cities. A few days later, a most influential colleague of his came to see me as I was leaving Paris to ask whether, as an American newspaper man, I could assure him that the United States would "defend the frontiers of France."

I replied that he ought to know better than to ask such a question. For he must know that the United States did not have the troops to man the Maginot Line, that the only way we could defend the frontiers of France was the way we are now defending them, by possessing the power to strike at the vital centers of Russia if the Red Army started to invade the West.

HE THEN asked me whether this meant that we were not intending to fight a preventive war while we still had a monopoly of the atomic bomb. I asked him how long he thought it would take us to mount an offensive near enough to Russia to drop enough atomic bombs on enough places to be decisive. He thought it would certainly take several months. What then did he think the Russians would be doing in the meantime? They will be occupying Paris, he replied.

Were these not the answers to his questions: that the Russians can ruin Europe and that the Americans can ruin Russia, and that this is a military stalemate which only a criminal lunatic would attempt to upset?

THESE conversations reveal, I believe, the problem of the war psychosis which afflicts mankind, and what we can and should do about it. All of Europe outside the Russian orbit is obsessed with a dual fear. The first is that we won't act decisively and effectively and before it is too late to stop the Red Army from advancing to the west; that the Red Army might advance to the west if Moscow believed we would not react promptly and adequately. The second fear is that we shall quarrel with the Russians over the Far East or the Middle East, and forget that the war, wherever it starts, will be fought in Europe over the prostrate body of Europe. They are afraid, in other words, that we won't defend them and at the same time that we shall drag them into a war.

THE REMEDY, it seems to me, is almost self-evident. It is to find a way of stating clearly and unequivocally that a military advance beyond the armistice line would be an act of war; that the armistice is not within the jurisdiction of the Security Council and that therefore in a violation of the armistice the veto is not pertinent. Such a statement would not be a new commitment. But it would go a long way to allay the panic.

But that is not enough. It is necessary also to answer the fear that we could be provoked, incited, or tempted to use our tremendous offensive superiority. We should, therefore, declare—I think to the General Assembly before it adjourns—that we shall never use the atomic bomb or any other weapon except to retaliate against a deliberate, overt, and unmistakable act of military aggression by a first-class power.

THE TIME has come for the United States to transcend the cold war, and to clear the air for the European recovery program and the negotiation of treaties of peace for Germany and Austria and Japan. We can, I believe, clear the air if we decide to employ our manifest military superiority constructively, to allay fear, to provide a sense of security, to disarm suspicion, and to bring the world and ourselves back to sanity and to peace.

Off The Record

By Ed Reed

"William! Stop dreaming about your bachelor days."

Text of Marshall's Statement

The text of Secretary Marshall's statement on "loyalty" dismissals follows:

ON June 23, 1947, the department dismissed 10 employes which it considered, after thorough administrative investigation, to be potential security risks to the department.

The department neither made nor contemplated making a public announcement of the action with respect to these employes. This was in an effort to protect them against inaccurate assumptions. It was only after the matter had been reported in th epress that the department made its press statement (on June 27). The department has never released the names of the employes against whom the action was taken. The department's action was, in large part, based on highly classified material not under its control. For this reason, the department determined that it could not give the employes a full statement of charges. Without charges, a true hearing was impossible. Appeal to an appropriate authority outside the department which would have the right to disclose charges was contemplated.

A special committee of three was established and the employes concerned were notified that they might, if they wished, make a statement for their record to this committee. The department did not consider this a hearing, nor did it represent it as such to the employes.

ON July 9 the Department established a Personnel Security Board of three departmental officers. At the first meeting of that board, the department requested the members to review the files of the employees who have been dismissed and to make a recommendation as to whether they should be permitted to resign, in view of the fact that it continued to be impossible to specify charges. On October 3, the board recommended that three persons be permitted to resign without prejudice. It further recommended "that the discharges of all of the others listed above be allowed to stand and that none of these former employees be now permitted to resign without prejudice."

Subsequently the board established policies and procedures which were made available to the press. In discussing those principles and procedures, I have stated that it is the department's policy that employees will, wherever possible, be given written notice of charges, the right to representation by counsel, and formal hearing.

In the case of the previously dismissed employees, it is the department's position that further review must come from established appeal bodies with authority to use classified documents and information. The department has already stated that the statute under which it acted established the Civil Service Commission as the body to determine the eligibility of such persons for employment in other government agencies.

FURTHER, in announcing the Personnel Security Board (July 9), the department stated: "Individuals will be permitted to appeal to the Loyalty Review Board, established under executive order 9835 of March 22, 1947, or any other review board established pursuant to law. The purpose of such an appeal will be to permit the employe affirmatively to establish his loyalty." The department is informed that a Loyalty Review Board, contemplated under the executive order referred to above, is now being established.

The department will make available to the commission o rto the board its files with respect to any employe appealing to the commission or to the board. Any information in that file fully under the control of the department may be made available to the employe as specific charges. Security clearance of any other material in the file will be the responsibility of the commission or board.

Amish Bishop Faces Trial

he couldn't even find anyone to repair his shoes in his community.

The defendants maintained Yoder didn't quit the church, but was expelled.

Jones described the beard-pulling in his opening speech before Judge Walter J. Mougey and a jury of nine men and three women.

Jones said the bishop visited the Yoder farm in 1946 to try to force Yoder's father, Joseph, to "get Andy off the farm."

"This made Andy so mad he saw fire," Jones said. "He grabbed the bishop by the beard, pulled him outside and told him to begone."

Bishop Helmuth replied, "I'm sorry this case is on hand. We feel we'll stand on the confession of faith" which was written in 1632 in Dortrecht, Holland, on the sixteenth and seventeenth articles (dealing with excommunication and boycott).

The bishop testified that Yoder was "not too good" a church member.

Senators Order Complete Audit Of PHA Books

By the United Press

A Senate Executive Expenditures subcommittee yesterday ordered a "thorough-going" audit of the Public Housing Authority's fiscal 1945 books which the General Accounting Office found "too confused and faulty" to verify.

Chairman Herbert T. O'Conor (D., Md.) said the group decided that it would "invite" other Government agencies to keep faulty books if it permitted the housing authority to escape an annual audit.

He said recent hearings showed that the agency's wartime accounting practices were "lamentably poor," but he added that it should be pointed out "in fairness" that a new accounting system has been installed which has traced previously unpaid or uncollected items.

For economy reasons, he said, the new audit will be undertaken first in one or two regions under jurisdiction of the agency, now known as the Public Housing Administration. They will determine whether "circumstances justify a continuation of the audit to all regions."

He said that statements given the committee by agency officials "only serve to bear out the testimony of accountants and other witnesses that the accounting was grossly inaccurate and incomplete in many important details."

For example, he said, the committee would like to find out about an "unidentified" $608,261 debt listed for the Greenbelt (Md.) housing project as of June 30, 1946. Inquiries thus far, he said, have "brought only the unsatisfactory answer that this entry was made to 'balance the accounts.'"

In Court Here

U. S. Enters Suit of Negro Rail Firemen

The Department of Justice yesterday intervened in United States District Court here in behalf of Negro locomotive firemen complaining of discrimination.

The department's action was in the form of a motion, filed by Robert L. Stern, special assistant to the Attorney General, asking leave to file a statement supporting the firemen's case.

On October 27, the complainants filed a suit against three major Southern railroads and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen to force them to "discontinue discriminatory practices." They charged that Negro firemen were being denied promotions and seniority rights and were being discharged from their positions.

Supreme Court Ruling

They declared that an agreement between the Brotherhood and the railroads countenancing discriminatory practices had been declared illegal by the Supreme Court in 1944.

The Department of Justice petition repeated this point, stating that the Brotherhoods and the railroads cooperating with it, "have completely ignored and disregarded the Supreme Court's ruling. They have continued to go their way without paying any attention to the law of the land as it has been applied to the very contract here in issue by the highest tribunal."

In his motion to permit the Government to intervene, Stern declared that the public interest was involved in the enforcement of a Federal statute, the Railway Labor Act.

He explained that "there is a public as well as a private interest in this litigation which requires that the defendants' unlawful discriminatory conduct be restrained at the earliest moment."

A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, acting for a provisional committee of colored locomotive firemen, which brought the suit, yesterday telegraphed his gratitude to Attorney General Tom Clark for his "fine action."

Randolph said that it showed that "the Department of Justice means to implement the report of the President's Committee of Civil Rights."

He added that "all believers in human rights will applaud your efforts."

19,306 Labor Leaders File Non-Communist Affidavits

The flood of non-Communist affidavits from union officers, to beat the National Labor Relations Board's deadline, totaled more than 11,000 during October, the board announced yesterday.

Together with those submitted before October, the NLRB now has 19,306 such affidavits on file, it declared.

AFL President William Green filed an affidavit yesterday, to become the only member of labor's "Big Three" to comply with that section of the Taft-Hartley law.

CIO President Philip Murray, and John L. Lewis, boss o fthe AFL's United Mine Workers, have denounced the affidavit requirement as a "personal insult" to all organized labor and have challenged its constitutionality.

The agency had set October 31 as the deadline for filing by unions which had old labor cases pending. The cases of those which had not complied with the affidavit provision of the Taft-Hartley Act by that time, the board said, would be dismissed.

The NLRB has already begun this process, by throwing out three cases brought by unions which failed to comply by the deadline date. It must now screen some 1900 more petitions to determine which will be processed and which dismissed.

The NLRB gave the following breakdown of the affidavits it had received as of the end of last month:

From AFL officers, 13,320; representing 1635 local unions and 66 internationals.

From CIO officers, 608; representing 77 local unions and 14 internationals.

From independent unions, 5378; representing 683 local unions and 30 internationals.

Russia Could Put Us In Channel, Gavin Says

Oil City, Pa., Nov. 5 (AP).—Representative Leon H. Gavin (R., Pa.) said tonight that in his opinion "if Russia and her satellite nations were inclined to move in, they could push us through Europe into the English Channel in about three weeks."

It was his first statement on the European situation since his return from a tour there with a congressional committee.

Personal Property Tax Here Expected to Net 5.5 Millions

Personal property tax collections will bring the District about $5,500,000 this fiscal year, 48 per cent more than last year, a city tax official predicted yesterday.

James L. Martin, head of the Personal Property Tax Division, based his estimate in part on the fact that this year's September and October "take" was more than $860,000 higher than during the same period last year.

Another factor affecting anticipated income from personal property levies, he indicated, is the growing number of returns which are pouring into District tax offices.

"We're getting more returns in here every day," he pointed out. "Some are late rturns. Others are new returns."

A total of $2,739,918 in personal property tax payments poured into District tills during the two months, he said, compared with $1,876,057 last year.

Less than half of the increase was due to the boost in tax rates from $1.75 to $2 per $100 assessed value, ordered by the Commissioners last July, he declared.

More than $472,000 of the two-month boost must be attributed to the increased number of returns filed and the larger inventories listed by merchants, he pointed out.

"There is a natural increase in the amount of postwar goods available to dealers. Their personal property tax bills are higher as a result," he explained. "New and second-hand auto dealers, for example, for the first time in years have had stocks of cars."

His office sent out tax bills totaling $4,892,088 for the 1948 fiscal year, Martin said.

Epsicopalian Bishops Would Aid Divorcees

Winston Salem, N. C., Nov. 5 (AP). The House of Bishops of the Episcopal Church suggested today that any divorced member of the church be authorized to apply to his resident bishop or the ecclesiastical authority of his diocese for a judgment as to "his or her marital status in the eyes of the church."

Taking the position that it had no legislative authority, the house adopted a resolution making the suggestion to the general convention of the church.

Resignations of seven bishops were submitted to the meeting, and were referred to a committee.

The resignations were submitted by Bishop Robert E. Gribbin of western North Carolina, Bishop Frank W. Creighton of Michigan, Bishop John T. Dallas of New Hampshire, Bishop John D. Bentley of Alaska, Suffragan Bishop Benjamin T. Kenerer of Minnesota, Suffragan Bishop Edwin J. Randall of Chicago, and Missionary Bishop Alfred A. Gilman of Hankow, China.

The House of Bishops convened yesterday with about 130 members present.

Commons Defeats Plan To Retain Burma Rule

London, Nav. 5 (U.P.).—Commons defeated tonight, 288 to 114, a conservative motion to reject a government bill granting independence to Burma.

The vote came after Winston Churchill lashed the government for permitting Burma to leave the British Commonwealth and become a "foreign power." It means, Churchill said, a "bloody welter" like that in India.

School Shift Is Proposed

and G sts. ne.; or the Wheatley Elementary School, Montello ave. and Neal st. ne.

S. J. Bowen students would be regrouped with students of Greenleaf, 4th st. between M and N sw.; Amidon, 6th and F sts. sw., and Fairbrother, 10th and E sts. sw. Sixth grade students would occupy classrooms in Jefferson Junior High School, 8th and H sts. sw.

Girl students at Lenox Occupational School would be transferred to Buchman School, E st. between 13th and 14th sts. nw., and boys to either the Bryan School, 13th and B sts. se., or to Cranch, 12th and G sts. se.

Corning told the board he recommended abandonment of the five schools to bring about "more effective administration of the educational program and to reduce operating costs."

Students now attending Lincoln school will be transferred to Lenox. Dent students will be transferred to Brent School, 3rd and D sts. sw., and Corcoran pupils to Hyde, O st. between 32nd and 33rd sts. nw., or to Jackson, R st. between 30 and 31st sts. nw.

The transfer of Blow and Webb schools will provide 16 classrooms for the instruction of junior high school pupils now attending Browne Junior High School, making it possible to place 1223 of the 1836 part-time students on full programs, Corning said.

Transfer of Bowen School from white to Negro use will eliminate part-time instruction at Randall Junior High School, placing 1333 pupils on full-time instruction.

Corning emphasized that the transfers he recommended were only temporary and would not interfere with plans for new buildings.

Corning urged immediate action by the board in making the transfers.

A week's delay was granted at the request of Board Member Adelbert W. Lee to "give the citizens a chance to express themselves on it."

"Hasty action is unwise," Lee said. "It is a far-reaching project and the communities involved should be given a chance to understand it."

Although no previous announcement had been made that the transfers were contemplated four citizens appeared at the meeting in opposition. When questioned by board members they said that the transfers had been rumored in their communities.

In calling the special meeting for Wednesday, Dr. Maurer said that organizations wishing to be heard should notify Mrs. Elise Z. Watkins, secretary of the board, 24 hours before the meeting and should submit a statement in writing.

Both projects were authorized at the request of county school officials.

Known Death Toll From Peru Quake Mounts to 77

Lima, Peru, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—The known death toll of Saturday's earthquake in central Peru mounted sharply to 77 today as 20 additional fatalities were reported at Satipo and two in San Jeronimo de Tunas.

A further jump in the death toll was indicated as a runner arriving in Jauja from the Indian community of Uchubamba reported that an undetermined number of persons were killed and injured there.

Also, as communications were restored in the stricken area, reports came that many villages had been virtually destroyed by the quake and subsequent floods.

Only the fact that the quake struck at 10 a. m. Saturday—All Saints Day—was believed to have prevented much higher casualties because at that moment many villagers were visiting the cemetries as customary on that day.

U. N. Backs Korean Vote Commission

Reds Announce They Will Boycott Body; Puppet Government Reported in Making

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 5.—American proposals to have a United Nations commission observe free elections in Korea won approval today, amid growing reports that Russia soon would give control of her zone to a Communist puppet government, and withdraw Soviet troops.

Russia announced she would boycott the commission after her counterproposal was defeated 20 to 6. It called for removal of American and Soviet troops by January 1 to allow Koreans freedom from "intimidation" in establishing a central government.

The United States resolution received approval from 46 nations in the Assembly's Political Committee. There was no opposition, because the entire Societ bloc refused to vote. Four other nations, including the Scandinavians, abstained from voting.

American Proposal

The American proposal provides for elections by next March 31 on the basis of adult suffrage and the secret ballot, to establish a Korean national assembly. After the assembly creates a national government, United States and Russia are to relinquish military government to the Koreans, and withdraw troops in each zone "if possible within 90 days."

The resolution, approved with amendments by France, India, China and the Philippines, also calls on all members to "refrain from interfering" in Korea's affairs before it achieves independence, and from all acts "derogatory to the independence and sovereignty" of Korea. John Foster Dulles of the United States agreed to the resolution with the understanding that it did not affect the responsibilities of the occupying powers.

Refusal of the Russians to participate in the commission's functioning indicated it might not be permitted to enter the Soviet zone in northern Korea. Russia also has refused to participate at this Assembly in the Balkan commission and the "little assembly."

Unusually reliable sources here confirmed reports from Korea indicating that Russia was preparing to withdraw her troops within a few months across the Siberian border.

This act undoubtedly would embarrass the United States and would be accompanied by a propaganda campaign, it was declared, to arouse hatred against American forces remaining.

150,000 Korean Troops

The Soviets would leave behind about 150,000 Korean troops and the puppet government of the People's Interim Committee, which might be instructed to take part in national elections.

The United States has at present an interim assembly in its zone in southern Korea, half of whose delegates are appointed by the military government. The Soviets yesterday accused the United States of having created a "police state" by refusing to admit into the government labor and peasant organizations.

Dmitri Manuilsky of the Ukraine, in refusing a seat on the United Nations commission, warned that the American proposal was "fatal to Korea and dangerous to the peace and security of the world."

Although the commission may be refused admission to northern Korea, the United States hoped it would be able to help in setting up a permanent government—even if it is only in the American zone.

Members named to the commission are China, Australia, Canada, France, El Salvador, India, Philippines, Syria and Ukraine.

Canadian Communists Won't Join Cominform

Toronto, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Canada's Communist Labor Progressive Party will not seek membership in the information bureau established by Communist Parties of nine European nations, party leader Tim Buck said today.

Buck's announcement followed a similar announcement this week by the Communist Party of the United States which said it would not affiliate with the organization, described by some non-Communist observers as a revived Comintern.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

One on the Aisle—

A Timeless Sea Story

Camera's Great In 'Raider,' Too

By Richard L. Coe

"THE RAIDER," at the Little, is a splendid picture.

In it you'll find just about the finest seascapes the screen has ever pictured. A Technicolor camera has captured that elusive, ever-changing quality of the sea—its beauty and fabulous colors, sunset on the water, the moon drenching its opalescence on a calm, shimmering sea. There is no violent storm (somehow that would have been excessive in this succinctly restrained film), but there is an extraordinary quality of the everlasting deep in this short film which will thrill everyone who relishes the great waters.

Technically, "The Raiders" is a wartime documentary filmed in tribute to the Allied merchant navies. There are no professional actors in the cast. Originally it was titled "Western Approaches," signifying the sea lane to Britain. We saw it at least three years ago overseas and felt rather chagrined that it had not appeared in this country at a time when its point would have been more immediate.

But, surprisingly enough, the still regrettable time lag doesn't destroy the film's impact. The story has the simplicity of greatness. A lifeboat load of men is making for the Irish coast, 1000 miles away. A convoy sets out from New York and one ship separated from convoy and escort, steams into the lifeboat's path. Beneath the sea a German sub waits, its periscope poking above water at terrifying intervals. The sub commander knows that if any ship should come to the aid of the lifeboat, it will be a fine prize.

But the Fates are with the stranded crew of the Jason and the helpful ship Leander. When the sub's two torpedoes miss their mark and the U-boat surfaces, the Leander is able to win the day.

Exciting Impact

There is real excitment to this triumph—an excitement you don't find in the more contrived situation of those war films you may recall. An integrity of the script and the realism of the players pack a punch no studio-made film could achieve..

Pat Jackson at 26 wrote this fictional incident and directed the film, using men of Britain's and the Netherland's royal navies. the Ministry of War Transportation and the Allied merchant navies. Jackson earlier had created "Target for Tonight," "Ferry Pilot" and "Men in Danger." A further clew to his understanding of the sea is his hobby: sailing.

The men who play the roles speak their words with the ease that comes of usage. When a captain whose ship is having trouble sticking in convoy remarks, "At four knots we're helpless and at five we're a menace," it means something. When a plane is sighted above the clouds, someone asks, "Where's my tin bonnet?" and you're taken back to the doughty simple worded wartime men of action. And there's humor, too, in the handling of the ship's radio operator. "Sparks" carries a copy of Esquire, and worries about tobacco.

Yes, "The Raider" is a grand picture. In its brief time it reminds us of the awful excitement of war. That it has taken so long to reach us is but one reflection on the inability of man to master even so simple a matter as film distribution.

THE ICE-CAPADES of '48 are on the way. The big rink frolic is set for a 14-night stay, with two Sunday matinees, at Uline's beginning December 1. Donna Atwood and Bobby Specht again have the top spots in this new edition, and, of course, "The Old Smoothies," Orrin Markhus and Irma Thomas, will be on hand. Uline's is now accepting mail orders at 3d and M sts. nw. The price scale is $1.25, $2, $2.50, $3 and $3.50. With your money order or check don't forget to send along a stamped, self-addressed return envelope.

"I REMEMBER MAMA," with Charlotte Greenwood in the title role, will be next in the Theater Guild subscription series. The John van Druten play is due "sometime" in December, with "Carousel" set as the January offering. The Guild's local office (in the National's mezzanine lobby) will accept subscriptions for the remaining four plays—the other two yet to be announced. The Guild office is open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons from noon till 5:30.

"SONG OF NORWAY" tickets go on sale today at the National box office. The opening next Monday night already has attracted an impressive group from the Norwegian Embassy, headed by the Ambassador, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne.

IT'S NOW CHIEF BARKER Frank M. Boucher for the Variety Club. The theatrical club beat the rest of the Nation to the polls, electing these new officers for the next year: Jake Flax, first assistant chief barker; Wade Pearson, second assistant chief barker; Sam Galanty, treasurer; Art Jacobson, property master. The board of governors for '48 includes Carter T. Barron, A. E. Lichtman, George Crouch, Robert Denton, Hardie Meakin and Leon Makover as well as the newly elected officers. Five past chief barkers remain on the board: Nathan D. Golden, J. E. Fontaine, Fred S. Kogod, Sam Wheeler and Vincent Dougherty.

EDUCATIONAL FILMS made for the McGraw-Hill text-series are being shown at special sessions this week by the United States Office of Education. Finale of the series, one on health, will be shown today in the Archives Auditorium at 3 o'clock.

High Cost of Living Blamed on Vinson

By Drew Pearson

Hindsight is always easier than foresight, but in view of the zooming high cost of living and current proposals to reimpose the excess-profits tax, it's important to look back and see who was right and who was wrong in the days when the seeds of inflation first were planted.

Eccles

Chief responsibility for abolishing the excess-profits tax must rest at the feet of much-loved Chief Justice Fred Vinson, then Secretary of the Treasury. Various experts argued with him that throwing this tax out the window so soon after the war was bound to head the country into inflation. Vinson, however, was adamant.

Among those who argued with Vinson were Postmaster General Bob Hannegan, who, as commissioner of internal revenue, know a lot about taxes and Marriner Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, who has kept his feet on the ground economically better than anyone else around the White House.

Three Senators also opposed removal of the excess-profits tax—Connally of Texas, Fulbright of Arkansas and O'Mahoney of Wyoming—all Democrats. In fact, they were the only Senators to make speeches against the lush tax reward being tossed into the lap of big business. No Republicans spoke up.

What Hannegan, Eccles and the Senators told Vinson was that the minute big business had an incentive for making big profits, the clamor for higher prices would begin. Price controls would then come off and we would find ourselves right in the middle of post-war inflation. But as long as profits and prices were kept low, they also told Vinson, labor could not successfully demand higher wages.

With 80 per cent of business profits being paid into the United States Treasury, Vinson was also urged, corporations were willing to keep prices down. There was no percentage in raising them.

Secretary Vinson, however, turned a deaf ear. He even became a little irked when Senator Fulbright of Arkansas tried to convince him. And since the popular, likable Vinson at that time was the man closest to Truman, a presidential message was sent to Congress just two brief months after the end of the war, recommending that the profit bars be lowered to big business.

Predictions Come True

Since then all the predictions made by Hannegan, Eccles, and the three Democratic Senators have more than come true. Corporate profits have soared as never before in history. United States Steel has just cut the juiciest dividend melon since the lush days on the eve of the Hoover depression. Bethlehem Steel has done like wise.

During the first six months of this year, the profits of 402 major companies listed on the New York Stock Exchange zoomed for an increase of 97.9 per cent over their profits for the same period last year.

Yet last year, profits were high. In fact, the Commerce Department reported that after paying all taxes, corporate profits for 1946 were $12,500,000,000—an all-time record in American history.

On top of this tremendous profit record for 1946 it now looks as if profits for 1947 would be just about double.

That is why labor looks at the dividend announcements of the steel, oil and machinery companies and asks for more wages. And that, in the opinion of many Government economists—who sometimes don't have much to say around the White House—is the basic reason why the cost of living continues to soar.

Many people have wondered about the change of economic viewpoint so obvious in Chief Justice Fred Vinson in the last two years. Once a fighter for liberal ideals, Vinson, both as Secretary of the Treasury and on the Supreme Court, has veered steadily to the right. Close friends say the reasons are: (1) The death of Franklin Roosevelt, whose strong leadership Vinson followed; (2) The retirement of Vinson's chief assistant, Ed Pritchard, who for many years kept Vinson in the liberal grove.

Under the Dome

Senator Harry Cain, the irrepressible Republican from Washington, mysteriously disappeared while traveling through Germany with the Senate Judiciary Committee. Worried colleagues notified the military government which spread a zone-wide alarm. Two days later the missing Senator turned up, safe and smug. He had borrowed a jeep and taken a ride on his own . . . Naval shake-ups: Admiral Duke Ramsay is slated to be the new Commander of the Pacific Fleet . . . Vice Admiral Donald B. Duncan will become Assistant Chief of Naval Operations, the No. 2 man in the Navy Department in Washington . . . Admiral Sherman Forrest will soon replace Admiral Richard L. Conolly as Commander of the Atlantic Fleet . . . U. S. troops scheduled to leave Italy on December 15—the date specified by the peace treaty, actually will beat the gun and exit on December 6 . . . Meanwhile the Red army, still strong in Bulgaria, gives no visible sign of leaving.

Hearing Treatment Protested

Attorneys representing Captain Theodore F. Vollten, suspended Montgomery County detective chief, left a Montgomery County Police Trial Board hearing yesterday, charging their client received "disgraceful treatment."

At the hearing, which was continued until November 20, the board denied by a 2-to-1 vote a request from Vollten's attorneys for "more specific" charges.

County Attorney F. Barnard Welsh, who prosecuted the charge, said the board could not supply exact dates, declaring, "This would be impossible to do unless detective captains are required to punch time clocks."

As yesterday's hearing opened, the 50-year-old Vollten, who has 17 years of detective duty in Montgomery County, was charged with failure to regularly attend his office for performance of his duties, with failing to make case assignments and to supervise his detectives and with failure to keep office records and furnish requested reports.

A charge of failing to devote his full time and best efforts to investigation and solution of criminal cases was dropped at the insistence of Vollten's lawyers, Joseph B. Simpson, pr., and Miss Vivian Simpson, Simpson's law partner.

Attorney Simpson told the board he felt his client "after long and honorable service is certainly entitled to the same rights as a low-grade criminal." He contended some of the charges were "too vague and general to answer," and that Captain Vollten is "entitled to know the exact dates and full particulars on the alleged derelictions."

In suspending Vollten, Police Chief Charles M. Orme specified the period between January 3 and October 24 as the period for which Vollten is charged. County Attorney Welsh, however, freely admitted he could not furnish the exact dates.

Supporting Welsh's contention were police trial board members J. Douglas Bradshaw, Takoma Park attorney, and Police Commissioner Wesley I. Sauter.

Loans, Assets Of Equitable Set New Peak

By S. Oliver Goodman

Equitable Cooperative Building Association set four new records during the past year, President Walter S. Pratt reported yesterday to shareholders at their sixty-eighth annual meeting.

The increase in home loans was the greatest in the institution's history, he said, and the gains in assets, shareholders and borrowers also established new records. Home loans now total $9,565,795, up $1,677,000 for the year.

The outlook for another excellent year is bright, he added. Equitable is negotiating construction loans for about 200 houses for war veterans, expected to total about two million dollars.

In his annual report Secretary Edward L. McAleer pointed out that resources reached a new peak of $11,425,000, a gain of $683,892 during the past year.

Shareholders elected Richard F. Green, president of the Farmers Banking & Trust Co. of Montgomery County, to the board of directors. Reelected directors are Ralph P. Barnard, Fontaine C. Bradley, Charles H. Doing, Arthur B. Heaton, Alfred H. Lawson, Robert L. Lewis, Harry G. Meem, Frank H. Stryker, Col. Wilson L. Townsend, Pratt and McAleer.

TELEPHONES: Washington ranks second only to San Francisco in number of telephones per 100 population, according to a compilation by the Bell Telephone Magazine. This city has 41 telephones per 100 population, while San Francisco boasts 44 per 100. The figures are as of January 1, 1947, with estimated D. C. population of 940,000 and estimated San Francisco population of 830,500. Nationally, there are 22 telephones per 100 persons.

HONOR: Directors of Home Mutual Building and Loan Association, prior to the fiftieth annual meeting of shareholders, gave a testimonial luncheon to Board Chairman Odell S. Smith at the Burlington Hotel yesterday. Smith, sole surviving member of the original staff that started the institution in 1897, served as secretary for 45 years before moving up to his present post. Reelected were Joseph F. Brashears, president; Frank S. Phillips, vice president; Marian W. Smith, secretary-treasurer, and Frank S. Smith, attorney.

Odell Smith

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Thomas L. Wyatt, former Marine Corps captain, was appointed a representative of J. D. Marsh & Associates, general agent of Lincoln National Life Insurance Co. . . . John J. Schumann, jr., president of General Motors Acceptance Corp., was elected a director of Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. . . . R. Stewart Kilborne was elected president of William Skinner & Sons, silk and rayon makers.

ODD LOTS: Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index remained at $6.78 for week ended November 4 . . . Bethlehem set new record of finished steel shipments in October, delivering 879,285 net tons of rolled steel and other finished products. Previous record was in March, 1945, when shipments totaled 857,511 net tons . . . Stockholders of Greyhound Corp. ratified change in value of common stock from no-par to $3 par and a reduction of authorized common stock from 15 million to 12 million shares . . . Montgomery Ward & Co. reported October sales of $127,143,899, a new record for month.

NEW OFFERINGS: A new issue of $5,300,000 Baltimore County (Md.) school bonds was offered yesterday by Drexel & Co. and associates. The bonds were offered at prices to yield from 0.80 to 2.10 per cent, according to maturity. The high bid of 100.06 represented an interest cost of 1.929 per cent to the county . . . F. R. Lushas & Co., Inc., yesterday offered 75,000 shares of B. L. Lemke & Co. common stock at $3.62½ a share.

RAIL NETS OFF: The Association of American Railroads said yesterday estimated net income of class 1 railroads in September was $21,150,000 compared with $39,800,000 in September, 1946. September was the first month in which increased wages awarded non-operating employes by an arbitration board became effective. A general 10 per cent freight rate increase granted the railroads by the Interstate Commerce Commission to cover this wage hike and other increases in operating costs did not go into effect until October. Net income of the Class I roads for the first nine months of 1947 was estimated at 316 million dollars compared with 105 million dollars in the corresponding period last year.

EARNINGS: Virginia Electric & Power Co. reported net income of $6,026,500 in 12 months ended September 30, compared with $7,631,466 for previous 12 months. Other income reports yesterday included:

Business Outlook

Strayed: 17 Billion Dollars; If Found, Notify Treasury

By J. A. Livingston

WHERE DOES all the money go? That's more than a household question in these days of the high cost of living.

The Treasury reports $28,500,000,000 currency in circulation, four times what it was in 1939. But there's more than a reasonable doubt that the money circulates. It just seems to stay out.

Livingston

Sure, the high cost of living has something to do with the large cash supply. Proof of that is the $10 bill. It's no longer the Nation's monetary staple. In 1939, the 10-spot accounted for 23 per cent of all money outstanding, coin included. Today it's about the same—22 per cent. The 20's now the volume bill—32 per cent of the total as against 20 per cent in '39. It takes a 20 to do what a 10 used to.

If all the country's cash were divided by arithmetic—instead of by labor, talent, luck, and the propensity to hoard—each household would have about $500. But you get a different answer when you ask questions.

For three years now, investigators of the Survey Research Center of the University of Michigan have been trying to find out for the Federal Reserve Board how much cash people have. They can't be too sure of the results.

Most householders talk freely about the family income, the amount invested in savings bonds, and even the amount of bank deposits. Indeed, wives will bring out savings bank books to verify totals. But when it comes to telling how much cash is on hand, sh-h-h. That's top secret.

SOMETIMES mom won't tell because she doesn't want pop to know what she keeps in the cracked cookie jar in the corner of the cupboard. And pop, when questioned, discloses that he has his own pile—tucked away somewhere. But he won't say where or how much. Then there's reticence born of caution. Why invite a robbery by telling anyone that there's a wad of bills around the house?

There are exceptions to this rule—like the vice president of a large company who scratched his head at first then burst into a broad grin, saying: "I'm glad you asked that question. During the bank panic of 1933 I stowed $10,000 in bills in my safety deposit vault and haven't been near the place since. Forgot all about it. Thanks for the reminder." Such frankness and absent-mindedness are unique, almost unbelievable.

Upshot of the University of Michigan survey was this: The median family in the United States admits to having about $50 spending money. That includes the cash the man of the house keeps in his wallet, the amount mom uses for groceries, and the allowance the kids have for carfare and school lunches.

At first that seems like a lot—considering that some poorer families live from dollar to dollar. Yet it comes to only about three billion dollars. And if you add to it the eight billions the Federal Reserve estimates that corporations, businessmen and banks keep on hand for change, payrolls, petty cash, and other purposes, that still accounts for only 11 out of 28 billion.

SO, WHERE are the rest of the dollars?

Some are held by foreigners. That's known. Ever since World War I, the American dollar has been a store of value abroad. The United States currency has been stable compared to the mark, franc, lira, or even the pound. And then, during the war, refugee money is supposed to have sought the dollar bill.

Some are held by professional gamblers, who prefer cash to the trail left by bank deposits. And, of course, in flush times like these, the amount of dollars taken in by bookies, card houses, numbers-racket operators, etc., would rise.

Some are held by persons who have distrusted banks ever since the run of failures in 1932-33. This goes for urban as well as rural families. As earnings increased so did their currency holdings. And seldom do they tell questioners what they have.

Some are held by business operators who have got rich during the war, but wish to avoid income taxes. Again, cash leaves no trace.

And some of the dollars have just plain disappeared. They've been lost—never to be found again. As such, they represent a profit the Treasury will never realize.

But how much is held where, by whom and for what reason or purpose?—that's the 17-billion-dollar question Treasury and Federal Reserve officials want the answer to. Any ideas?

British Output Shows 17% Gain Over 1938

Oxford, England, Nov. 5 (Spl.).—The Oxford Institute of Statistics reports that in 12 representative industries in Britain there is an average increase in output per manhour of 17 per cent compared with 1938.

This news is pointed up by the latest output figures for Britain's steel industry. In recent weeks, its output has been equivalent to a rate of 14.2 million tons a year, or 36 per cent above the 1938 average. The target is 14 million tons.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Cotton futures registered gains of $1.15 to $2.45 a bale in active dealings today.

Southern advices that a leading mill group had reached a compromise agreement on higher wage demands, which might avert a threatened strike in many Southern plants, also aided trade sentiment.

Mills covered futures contracts aggressively for the first time in more than a week which reflected the continued strong demand for almost all classes of textiles. Dealers also felt that the market has largely discounted a possible 200,000 to 300,000 bales increase in the next Government cotton crop forecast due November 10.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 5 (AP).—Grains moved upward in a moderate trade on the Board of Trade today, spurred mainly by unofficial reports the Administration might place less emphasis upon its program to combat domestic high prices when Congress convenes.

Most strength centered in the December wheat contract in which a little mill buying was apparent. Other grains followed the move of the bread cereal. Soybeans and lard also established modest gains.

Wheat finished 1½ to 3 cents higher, December 2.92¾@2.94; corn was 2½ to 3 cents higher, December 2.31@2.31⅝, and oats were ⅛-1¼ higher, December 1.14⅜@1.14⅝.

A Washington report said the Administration was most anxious to obtain foreign relief credits at the special session of Congress and therefore might be willing to compromise on plans to control prices by allocations, ceilings, or other devices. The report lacks official confirmation.

Although weather again was clear in the Southwest, the outlook was more favorable from the wheat crop standpoint. Rains were predicted for western Kansas and Nebraska, starting tonight, and spreading over the entire two States by tomorrow morning.

Montgomery Taxicab Law Challenged

The 3-month-old Montgomery County taxicab ordinance was challenged in court yesterday for the first time.

Judge Stedman Prescott of Montgomery Circuit Court took under advisement the case brought under the ordinance, and involving two defendants arrested on a charge of organizing a cab company without permission of the county commissioners.

James R. Miller, attorney for the two men, charged several provisions of the ordinance are unconstitutional.

In the case, Edward J. Toth and William B. Wrenn, both drivers for Owner Richard M. Phelps of Suburban Cab, are charged with illegally organizing a new cab association of former Suburban drivers.

U. S. Jumpers Trail Horse Show Field

Mexican Team Wins, With Irish Second; D. C. Champion Wins Another Event

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Mexican army jumpers captured the first team event in international military competition at the National Horse Show today as the U. S. Army riders from Fort Riley, Kans., finished a poor last.

A slim matinee turnout of some 2000 at Madison Square Garden saw the Mexican horsemen score an impressive triumph in the first of four events leading to the challenge trophy, with the Irish army team second, the Canadians third and the United States fourth and last.

The United States team lost heavily in the event when two mounts refused a jump three times.

Lieut. Col. Frank S. Henry of the United States team was eliminated when Rascal refused to take the target jump after he had turned in a perfect ride on Roll On. Capt. Jonathan Burton of the United States team had 16¼ faults on Air Mail and a refusal on Outcast.

The eliminations left the Canadian team with 44¼ points and the United States team with 74¾, a total almost impossible to overcome in the three remaining events.

Portmaker, a 7-year-old brown gelding who won the hunter championship of the 1946 show for Dr. and Mrs. Alvin I. Kay of Washington, D. C., opened the defense of his title by taking this afternoon's competition for middleweight hunters, one of 13 events counted toward the championship, with Earl Phelps in the saddle.

Prompt Payment, reserve champion last year, also picked up where he left off by placing second today. Owned by Mr. and Mrs. John T. Maloney of Warrenton, Va., Prompt Payment was ridden by Ellie Wood Keith.

Results:

Minnesota Names Commission To Study Resettlement of DPs

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 5 (AP).—A 10-member Minnesota commission on resettlement of displaced persons was created today by Gov. Luther W. Youngdahl, who said the commission will study the resettlement in Minnesota of "some of the homeless and tragic people of Europe who seek to come to this land."

Governor Youngdahl stated that so far as he is concerned he would be "happy to invite" all so-called and mislabeled "displaced persons" of Europe to come to Minnesota, feeling confident that this State and the land would be enriched by their residence here.

"However," the Governor said, "common reason and good sense dictate that we withhold the exact number to be invited until such time as a committee of able men of this State, representing church, labor, agriculture and welfare, have the opportunity to make a study of the situation."

Later, after Congress passes suitable legislation to make possible the entry of displaced persons, the Governor said the commission will study the problem of their reception and resettlement in detail.

Under the Stratton bill pending in Congress, 400,000 DP's would be permitted to enter the United States over a four-year period.

Phone Firm Cites Cost Increases

Richmond, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—R. W. Michie, vice president of Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia, told the State Corporation Commission today the company has kept "in the black" during the war principally by a "phenomenal increase in revenues from interstate long distance calls.

Michie was the second witness put on the stand by T. Justin Moore, the company's counsel, during the opening day of hearing on the company's counsel, during the opening day of hearing in the company's application for a rate increase which would boost residence telephones by about 25 cents a month and business rates about 50 cents.

The phone company official, in more than three hours of testimony, went extensively into an explanation of C. & P. financial operations in Virginia and produced charts showing sharp increases in operational and maintenance costs.

Referring to an increase in intrastate rates granted by the SCC last January, Michie said the boosts then were based on 1946 needs. The situation now, he said, has changed materially and more money is needed.

Greatly increased labor costs was cited by Michie as the primary factor which had added to the company expenses.

Montgomery Officials Warned of Morgan Suit

An attorney for Montgomery County Civil Service Commissioner Jo V. Morgan yesterday threatened a lawsuit against "at least one county official."

The threat, made by Attorney James R. Miller, was the latest development in the long-standing feud between Morgan and Montgomery County's board of commissioners.

Miller announced that "we anticipate filing a suit" following a pretrial hearing in Rockville, held for the purpose of determining author of a county governmental press release critical of Morgan.

The release, given to newspaper reporters October 1, accused Morgan of "dilatory service" and was an official admission that a slash in Morgan's salary from $4800 to $1200 was made "in the hope he would resign."

Leahy Worried About Keying Up Irish

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ARMY-NOTRE DAME—To hear Earl Blaik and Frank Leahy tell it, some merciful agency ought to step in and call off the Army-Notre Dame game scheduled for Saturday at South Bend. Blaik has been wailing all week that he is leading his West Point lads into a slaughter, no less, and Leahy is quaking in his boots at the prospect of sending his poor, unbeaten, overconfident Irish lads against the big rough Army brutes.

POVICH

Nobody believes them, of course. The pregame moaning of Blaik and Leahy has been rote every year. They'll go through with the game. Each coach will have built up a pregame alibi in case of defeat. The Notre Dame-Army bleating is always one of the worst shams of the football season.

You'd have to say they're both pretty good football teams at this point. Between them, they've lost one game this season, and that by one point—Army's 21-20 defeat by Columbia. Army, without Blanchard and Davis, is no longer a powerhouse but it held Illinois to a scoreless tie. The Army line may even be better than Notre Dame's.

All Army has to do on Saturday to beat the Irish is to stop Johnny Lujack. That, incidentally, would be the trick of the week. In five winning games this year, All-American Johnny hasn't had his pants dirtied yet.

CUSTOMER BATTLE—In New York it comes up Sunday for the first time this season that the Giants of the National Football League and the Yankees of the All-America Conference stage counterattractions. And at this point the Yankes like the whole idea.

At Yankee Stadium, the conference team meets the high-powered San Francisco Forty-Niners, while across the river at the Polo Grounds, it's the Giants playing the Philadelphia Eagles. The Giants haven't won a game in six starts, are out of the league race, don't have an outstanding star and no great claim on customer patronage.

The Yankees are riding high, with seven wins in nine games, and are at the top of their division. They have Spec Sanders and Buddy Young, the big names. In the Forty-Niners they'll be meeting up with more big names—Norm Standlee, Frankie Albert. The infant AAC at last figures to outdraw the Giants in New York. And coming up on successive Sundays are the Yankees' big games with Cleveland, Los Angeles and Buffalo.

THE SECOND BOUNCE—The St. Louis Browns' overhead expenses are being nicely maintained by the latest action of the business office. The other day they bought up the 1948 contract of Manager Muddy Ruel at a cost of $25,000 and fired him, which makes it two straight. All last year they were paying Luke Sewell a $25,000 salary for not managing the Browns after firing him at the end of the 1946 season.

The complaint against Ruel was that he finished in eighth place. True enough, he did, but it didn't represent much of a retreat by the Browns who finished seventh in 1946. Yet, it was something of a surprising development. The Browns figured to do better. As Clark Griffith said, "They look like the best eighth club I ever saw in 60 years of baseball."

Apparently that's what the Browns' business office thought, too. It was with a refreshing lack of nicety that they announced the buying-off of Ruel's contract. Usually they thinly disguise such action with the "resignation" malarkey. Ruel himself was also very frank. "I was fired," he admitted.

THE REDSKINS—They have it all nicely figured out that, despite four beatings in their first six games, they can still win the Eastern Division championship. All they have to do is win all the rest of their six games, beating the Steelers, the Cardinals, the Lions, the Giants, and the Boston Yankees twice. Echo answers, "What with?"

Certainly the Redskin team that was hoodwinked so completely by the Eagles last Sunday isn't going to beat the Steelers or the Cardinals, and there is grave doubt they can win even one of their games with Boston. This is probably the worst Redskin team they've ever fielded, and Coach Turk Edwards blames his poor material.

Poor material it may be, but it's the material the Redskin coaches and advisory council picked last year when it had most of the country to choose from. Those two tackles, Fred Davis and Paul Stenn, who were traded away by the Redskin masterminds would fit nicely in the Redskin line now. And Jack Jacobs who was traded to Green Bay is a better performer than anybody in the Redskin backfield except Sammy Baugh.

He's the Boy

IF ST. JOHN'S gets by Central at Griffith Stadium Friday night, Jack George will undoubtedly be the boy who'll have a big hand in the Cadet victory. He not only passes for his team, but also runs, punts, kicks extra points and is their best defensive man. Here he's about to get off a jump pass in practice as teammates Dick Robey, left, and Dick Fennell rush in. Robey plays left end and Fennell is the St. John center

St. John's Banks on Quarterback George To Upset Central at Stadium Tomorrow

Jack Has .667 Pass Percentage

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The undefeated, untied, but underdog St. John's Cadet football team which takes the field tomorrow night against Central's once-beaten Vikings at Griffith Stadium, is placing its hopes almost fully on Jack George, lanky quarterback.

Central is the big obstacle in the way of St. John's first perfect season in 15 years, and if George, capble all-around performer, is in form, Cadet Coach Joe Gallagher sees no reason why his charges can't upset the dope Friday.

The Cadets have three big reasons for wanting to upset the Vikings:

1. This is the 26-year-old Gallagher's first season at the St. John's helm, and the boys would like to make their popular coach a present of a perfect beginning.
2. In the past 10 years of the St. John's-Central series, the Cadets have won only one time, four years ago.
3. With Central tied for the public high league lead with McKinley Tech, the Cadets, claimants of the Catholic High title, could stake a fair claim to the Washington high school championship by beating the Vkings.

A Lot of Good Reasons

There's good reason why the Cadets place so much of their faith in the 6 foot, 168-pound George. He is their best passer and punter, and one of their better ball carriers. He kicks their extra points, and is their best man on pass defense.

His offensive talents have contributed to all 127 points the Cadets have scored in beating Calvert Hall of Baltimore, Charlotte Hall Military Academy of Mechanicsville, Md.; Montgomery-Blair, Western, Chamberlain Vocational and Georgetown Prep.

Here is George's record:

He has completed 48 of 72 pass attempts for a .667 percentage.

Twelve of his tosses have been for touchdowns.

He has punted 15 times for a 38-yard average.

He has carried the ball 12 times for 60 yards or a 5 yards per try average. One of his runs was for a touchdown.

From the defensive halfback post, he has intercepted five passes.

And he has converted successfully 11 of 16 attempts from placement.

George's favorite pass target is

Poch Leads Cadet Ground Gainers

Tom Fannon, a 6 foot, 2 inch, 195-pound end, who has snared 26 passes for 416 yards and six touchdowns. Tied with Fannon for most touchdowns scored is 180-pound Left Halfback Bob Poch. Poch is St. John's big running threat. He has picked up 431 yards in 61 carrying assignments for a 7.6 average and he has caught four passes for exactly 100 yards.

JAMES GLETNER, THIS WEEK'S CONTEST WINNER
He's a Public Accountant and Figured to Win

The Guy 'Figured'

District Accountant Wins 4h Post Football Contest

A CERTIFIED public accountant who delves into football records and statistics just to keep his hand in is the winner of The Washington Post's "Pick the Grid Winners" contest this week.

The fellow who figured out the right answer was 26-year-old Jimmy Gletner of 1922 N st. nw., a CPA, employed by Wayne Kendrick & Co., accountants.

Without using a comptometer or adding machine, but carrying out his selections to the fourth decimal point, Jimmy came up with the prize-winning number —19 out of 20 right answers. He missed only the Texas A & M-Arkansas game which ended in a tie. He picked the Aggies.

THIS was Jimmy's fourth crack at the contest and he said last night "I figured I had it in the bag when I sent in my entry last week."

He selected Maryland over West Virginia, an upset of fair proportions, but he also picked S.M.U. over Texas, Saturday's biggest reversal.

He guessed Michigan, 34, Illinois, 7, on the game contestants had to select the score. Several in the contest picked the actual score, Michigan, 14; Illinois, 7.

GLETNER, who is married and has a 13-month-old daughter, bested a field of 35,357, the largest of the four-week-old contest. To date, over 121,000 persons have entered the test which pays off with four tickets to a top ball game every Saturday and also two tickets plus an all-expense paid trip to Philadelphia for the Army-Navy game November 29.

The winner had to bear down to cash in because 14 were tied for second place with only two misses. One of these was O. H. Townsend of 600 20th st. nw., who now has been runnerup for two straight weeks.

There are plenty of more chances for Townsend and the rest of you readers. Just fill out the blank at the bottom of this page. Today is the last day for this week's contest.

Turnesa Leads North-South

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 5 (AP).—Jimmy Turnesa, second youngest of the seven golfing brothers from New York went hunting on this warm fall afternoon and his bag included five birdies and an eagle as he racked up a 66 to grab the 36-hole North and South open golf tournament lead by four strokes with a 137 total.

The chunky 34-year-old unattached Elmsford, N. Y., professional equaled the record for this 45-year-old event with a glittering 32-34 effort, six under par—and the only sub-70 round of the first two days. He opened with a 71 yesterday over the 6,879-yard No. 2 course.

George Schoux, San Franciscan who plays out of Mamaroneck, N. Y., held second place with a 70 today for a 141 total, this despite a pair of sixes today and a seven yesterday. The five strokes lost to par on those three holes cost him a 136 and the lead.

In third place with his second 71 was Jack Grout, Harrisburg, Pa.

Capitols Beat Kauts, 76-59, In Dull Game

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Washington Capitols defeated the Indianapolis Kautskys, 76 to 59, in a not-so-thrilling exhibition basketball game at Uline Arena last night.

While the scoring marathon between the pro shotmakers elicited only faint cheers from the thin crowd of less than 1000, the performance of the Montgomery-Blair Band, Drum Corps and Majorettes made the evening entertaining.

Except in the first minute when they led, 3-2, the visitors trailed all the way and at one time were behind 19 points.

They pulled up to within six points of the Capitols shortly before intermission when the Caps obviously slowed up to make some sort of a contest of the affair.

The Capitols scoring was pretty evenly divided. Center John Mahnken had three baskets and a free throw to hold the halftime lead with seven points, one more than Jack Tingle, the freshman from Kentucky, owned.

Individual honors, however, belonged to Harold Genischen, of the visitors, who dumped in four baskets and two free throws for 10 points.

The Kautskys, representing the National Basketball League, were no match for the Eastern Division Basketball Association of America champions.

Forgetful Hunters Try It the Hard Way

Poplar Bluff, Mo., Nov. 5 (AP). Capt. Dale Kirk and Ralph Tuepker opened the duck hunting season yesterday under difficulties.

After building a blind and getting ready for the migratory waterfowl, they discovered:

Capt. Kirk had forgotten his shotgun shells.

Tuepker had forgotten his shotgun.

Grid Crowds Show Increase

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—College football attendance shows a six percent increase per game over a corresponding period in 1946 according to a Nation-wide survey of 91 representative schools. Only September and October home games were considered.

The Pacific Coast, with California and UCLA leading the way reflects the sharpest increase, 14 per cent per game. Eastern football is close behind with a per game advance of 12 per cent.

Attendance sagged a bit at the midwestern schools where a survey of 61 games played by 22 colleges indicated a two per cent decrease. The Southwest advanced less than one half of one per cent and 23 of the larger Southern schools averaged a four percent game increase.

Of 91 colleges listed, California's Golden Bears have attracted the most at home customers, 324,000 for five dates. Michigan with 282,117 for four games, Navy with 245,000for five games and Ohio State with 211,876 for three home games followed. In fact, Ohio State with a per game average of 70,625 despite a disappointing record, tops the field. Michigan is close behind.

Mid-season turnstile counts from the 91 colleges, covering 259 games, totalled 6,970,695 as compared to 6,804,079 for 267 games during a similar period last fall. Broken down to per game figures, the bisis of all comparisons, the average 1947, turnout numbered 26,914 and the 1946 crowd 25,483

Sectional totals, inclusive because of the limited number of colleges listed, place the West in the lead with 2,013,605 attending 61 games. However the Far West has the best average crowd, 30,932.

C. U. Raiders Give Mount St. Mary's Free Paint Job

Catholic University and Mount St. Mary's, gridiron foes Saturday afternoon at Brookland Bowl, exchanged pregame campus invasions yesterday.

It all started in the wee hours of yesterday morning when a group of Mount St. Mary's students stole the effigy of the Emmitsburg, Md., school that was to be used in a pep rally tomorrow night at C. U. They also took the sign from Gibson Hall where the effigy was being kept.

In retaliation, a battalion of C. U. students counter-attacked, and with bold strokes of scarlet paint, emblazoned the name of the Washington school on the buildings at Mount St. Mary's.

All this met with a nod of approval from Catholic U. Athletic Director Eddie La Fond, who denies he took part in the counter-attacking raiding party.

"It shows that while our football team is not big-time," he said, "our school spirit is.

Will It Be Leo?

Rickey Will Name Pilot By March 1

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Branch Rickey, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, returned with Leo Durocher, his former manager, from a three-day stay at his Chestertown, Md., home tonight to report he still did not know who will manage the Dodgers in 1948.

"Leo and I spent a few days hunting and fishing," Rickey said. "We also discussed baseball generally and specifically. I had him come down so that we could have more leisure and fewer interruptions."

Rickey Double Talk

Refusing to answer any questions pertaining to the Brooklyn manager's job other than to repeat, "All I can tell you is that we will have a manager by March 1," Rickey then outlined his position.

"There is a genuineness about my position that I cannot help, and that I regret deeply," he said. "I don't regret the genuineness but I regret the situation. I am trying to solve it the best I can. Insofar as the club is concerned it is not a disastrous situation. Insofar as my own feelings are concerned, it is regrettable."

Rickey would not go into details and brushed off a direct query when a reporter asked, "Is there a formal movement afoot to prevent Leo's return?"

He Won't Talk

"I don't want to discuss this," Rickey answered. "For obvious reasons nor do I wish to discuss anything pertaining to the managership of the Dodgers."

Rickey said he had not arranged for any further conferences with Durocher, whom, he said, was to return to California either tonight or tomorrow.

Rickey, revealing two deals were "on the fire," said he had discussed them with Durocher. He hastened to add that he also had discussed them with Burt Shotton, who managed the club to the 1947 pennant, and Arthur Mann, his assistant, and "anybody I think can help me."

Asked whether he still felt the way he did the day Durocher was suspended the 1947 season by Commissioner Chandler for "conduct unbecoming a manager," Rickey replied "yes, nothing has arisen since to make me change my feelings."

At that time Rickey said "I'd go to hell for Leo."

"Sometimes a man reveals his genuine feeling when making an impulsive remark," Rickey said. "It represented exactly how I felt then and I still feel that way."

Whether Durocher was to leave tonight for California was not immediately determined. A call to the airport brought the information that Leo had canceled a 4 p. m. reservation on a plane, but had another reservation for a midnight flight.

Leo, himself, could not be reached for comment. A phone call to his apartment brought no response.

Bell Sparmate As Louis Begins Serious Training

Pompton Lakes, N. J., Nov. 5 (AP). Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis today opened serious training for his December 5 Madison Square Garden title bout with Jersey Joe Walcott, and boxed savagely through four spirited rounds with two sparmates.

It was the first time Louis had done any serious boxing since his one-round knockout of Bronxite Tami Mauriello 14 months ago. Louis weighed 216 pounds for the workout. He said he planned to enter the ring at 208 or 209.

The champion went two three-minute rounds with Jimmy Bell of Washington, D. C., and two three-minute rounds against George Fitch. He had both boys in trouble with a vicious attack.

George Nicholson, former sparmate who now helps in the training of the champ, said "Joe looked like the Louis of old.

Rain Also Feared; May Slow Lujack And Tripucka

By Jerry Liska

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 5 (AP).—Coach Frank Leahy, asserting he was confronted by a "terrific" psychological problem in keying unbeaten Notre Dame for its struggle with Army, today admitted the Irish would have "a few little new things" to try and prayed for a dry field against the Cadets here Saturday.

He jested at a press conference before practice that these might include "the Statue of Liberty play, or some other old fashioned trick." But his secret weapon, if any, undoubtedly will revolve around Johnny Lujack, All-America Quarterback and fastest back on the Irish squad.

With Lujack drilling at Left Halfback, Leahy's plan may be to shake the Connelsville, Pa., flier loose for some passes from his brilliant understudy, Frank Tripucka, who Leahy concedes is in a red hot passing streak with 20 completions in 29 attempts.

Weather Big Isue

With a long range forecast of rain for Saturday, however, the Tripucka-Lujack bombing attack and the highly polished Irish aerial attack in general may have to be ditched by Leahy, who lamented that a damp Saturday would "hurt us tremendously."

"Our best weapon would be completely destroyed," Leahy said sadly, peering out the window at bleak, drizzling skies. "Our workout today will be the first one on a wet day this fall, although Lujack had some experience throwing a wet ball last spring."

Frank's gloom then switched to the mental aspect of the big finale of the historic series.

"We are confronted by a terrific problem in getting the boys keyed for this one," he said. "Our situation is just opposite from Army's since they have everything to gain and nothing to lose, having been once tied and defeated. Army will come into this game relaxed in an ideal mood.

Takes Gloomy Attitude

"As for Notre Dame, I don't know if we can get the boys as high emotionally as this game will require. Once we're on the field, it's too late to get all pepped up."

Leahy says he doubts whether Notre Dame is as strong going into the Army game this year as prior to last year's epic scoreless struggle at Yankee Stadium.

Injuries to key players, he explained, kept the Irish almost a month behind schedule in timing, coordination and conditioning. Furthermore, he said, the Irish lack their second-team strength of last year.

"I never realized how strong our reserves were last year, until I sent the College All-Stars against the Chicago Bears last August 22nd," he recalled. "At one time, the All-Stars had seven Notre Dame players on the field, and they included George Ratterman, Bob Skoglund, Jerry Cowhig and Bob McBride, who were 1946 replacements."

Questioners refrained from pointing out that Army was not quite the same as last season either, with Blanchard and Davis gone.

'Super Colossal'

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 5 (AP). Coach Earl Blaik of Army conceded today that his team's offense took a "big jump" forward in its game against Washington and Lee last week and said that he didn't believe his boys faced any more than merely a "super-colossal" task against Notre Dame on Saturday at South Bend.

"Of course," he said before today's practice session, "I'm fully aware of what's coming up, and the players can't help knowing it's like—shall we say?—a pressure cooker that is about to blow off. But I don't think we're worrying too much."

Favored Nathaniel Wins Pimlico Feature

Two Riders Injured in Jump Event

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 5.—A blanket finish involving three horses came in the $7500 added the Heiser, featuring the Wednesday program here. The Lazy F. Ranch's Nathaniel was the winner in the role of an odds-on favorite but the son of Challenger II had to be ridden to the end to take the Maryland-foaled sprint by a half-length margin.

In second position in the field of five came H. S. Horkheimer's Tony's Find, a neck in advance of Brookmeade Sable's Music. Art-Dale Stable's Gorget and Bobanet Stable's Trojan Flee were the only others in action after six scratches this morning.

Two jockeys were injured in the day's steeplechase. Jockey Darrell Clingman suffered a possible concussion and a broken shoulder and Jockey Eddie Mitchell's back was bruised.

Clingman was taken to the Maryland General Hospital where X-rays were being taken to determine the extent of his injuries. He was hurt when he crashed with Kent Miller's Battle Cruiser at the thirteenth jump.

Clingman was the second rider injured by the same horse. Jockey Jimmy McGovern is in the same hospital in serious condition as the result of a fall here last week.

Thrilling Stretch Run

The track was slow for the feature and Nathaniel, in charge of Jockey Doug Dodson, was clocked in 1:14. The colt returned a $3.20 win mutuel to his backers in a crowd of 12,940.

Nathaniel was never far out of it, being steadied along on the outside as Tony's Find and Music fought for the lead. Entering the stretch, Dodson brought Nathaniel out and went after the leaders. It was a three-way battle through the stretch with Music jammed between her rivals.

In the last 20 yards, Nathaniel gradually went to the front. Tony's Find outlasted the squeezed back Music. Many believed J. D. Jessop, who rode Music, would claim a foul but the boy merely weighed in and walked to the jockey's room with a disgusted look on his face.

The victory was worth $5875 to Nathaniel, winner of four of his 15 starts this year. The colt now has a 1947 total of $18,575.

This was the fourth time since the race was inaugurated in 1937 that the "get" of Challenger II has been the winner.

The jumping race proved an easy one for G. H. Bostwick's Little Sammie, the 7-year-old coasting to the wire ahead of Miss Ella Widener's Chance Bullet and Henry S. Horkheimer's Gala Reigh. Little Sammie, ridden by Jockey J. Smiley, was a $3.80 favorite and went the 15 jumps and 2 miles in 4:12 4/5.

Baugh Loses Passing Lead to Bears' Sid Luckman

But Skins Still Set Team Pace

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

As though things aren't gloomy enough around these parts, National Football League statisticians had to discover yesterday that Chicago's Sid Luckman has passed Sammy Baugh as the leading tosser.

Luckman, in sparking the resurgent Bears to the top of the heap as the all-around offensive power, has completed 100 passes in 175 tries for a percentage of 57.1. And that's a shade better than Slinging Sammy's 56.8 or 95 successful passes in 167 attempts. Luckman also has a slight yardage advantage over Baugh, 1463 to 1449.

However, Washington held its advantage in the throwing department. As a team, the Redskins clicked on 110 of 208 for 1718 yards. Chicago completed 108 for 208, good for only 1590 yards.

In total yardage gained, the Redskins also fall short. They dropped this week from second to third behind the Chicago Bears and Cardinals, boasting 2251 yards to the leader's 2377 and 2267, respectively.

On the strength of his runaway against Washington last Sunday, Philadelphia's Steve Van Buren leads Eastern Division runners in yardage (542) and average (5.3), but right behind by three players the Redskins will meet this week.

Clement, Lach and Cifers, Steeler stars, who will make it hot for Washington in Pittsburgh Sunday, have better averages than the Redskins' most productive ground gainer, Fullback Sol Rosato.

Against Pittsburgh the Skins will also be meeting the East section's highest scorer and best pass receiver. Lach holds a 9-point scoring edge over Dick Poillion who paces the Redskins with 33 points. And Val Jansante has caught 24 passes for 431 yards.

In two other departments at least Washington had no peers. Baugh is the league's best punter, despite the zero he registered on a blocked kick Sunday. His average is 45.8 yards a kick. Saenz, by covering 526 yards on kick-off returns, is over 100 yards ahead of his nearest competitor.

Bennings . . .

At Pimlico.

Dear Folks:

Jockey R. J. Martin has left the Shamrock Stable, having bought his contract from Trainer Jimmy McGee. Martin says he will ride free lance. The stable owned by Art Rooney has hired Paul Keiper. Frank Cronan, formerly "Lucky Lefty" the handicapper, is the new director of publicity for the Bowie track. He passes on the list of Bowie officials with the only change the appointment of Bill Schamerhorn as starter. A little bird told me that Marlboro has arranged to buy the steel from the Agawam track stands. Milton Feldman of the local press-box family is the new publicity director for Sunshine Park, the Tampa (Fla.) oval. Trainer Don Yates made a quick turnover. He claimed Leavetaking from George Perry and the 4-year-old won at the first asking for her new owner. W. L. Brann's Escadru, easy winner at Jamaica this week, is likely to start in the Pimlico Futurty on Saturday. Trainer Ed Christmas is expected to make the decision tomorrow. Fillies and mares will hold the spotlight on the Thursday card worth $10,000 in added money. William G. Helis' Earshot is the probable favorite. This filly has won four of six starts this season. See you on the rail . . . BILL.

Selections at Pimlico:

1—Freelands Lad, Sincon, Sun Target.

2—Esco Blade, Making Merry, Butterscotch.

7—Anne Again, Blue Pom, Electron.

8—American Wolf, Mr. Pleat, Balu Mike.

Nittany Lions Pass Michigan On Offense

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Penn State's Nittany Lions top the Nation in both offense and defense after six straight football wins.

Figures released today by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau show that the Lions not only took total offense leadership from Michigan's Big Nine juggernaut, but also retained and improved their grip on first place as the Nation's leader in rushing offense, total defense and rushing defense.

Only in the aerial game—forward passing offense (Michigan) and forward pass defense (North Carolina State)—do the Penn Staters yield honors.

Michigan's 183.2 yards per game through the air heads that classification, while North Carolina State's skimpy 27.6 yards per game yield to enemy aerials tops that listing.

Penn State still is bettering the modern total defensive record against passing and rushing which Santa Clara set in 1937 with a 69.9 yield per game. The Lions have given up 67.7 yards per contest in six games, and have three more left—Temple, Navy and Pitt.

In their most recent three games—against Syracuse, West Virginia (hitherto undefeated) and Colgate—the Lions held the opposition to 80 yards from both passing and rushing and, on the ground, repulsed 76 rushes for a net loss of minus 82 yards.

Punting honors still belonged to the South, with North Carolina leading for the fourth straight week with a 44-yard average per boot. Virginia, third a week ago, went into second place with a 42.8 average, and Texas, tenth last week, advanced to third at 42.6, although another kind of a boot—a try at point after touchdown—failed and dropped the Longhorns from the ranks of the unbeaten.

Fair Grounds Ready For 75th Race Meet

New Orleans, Nov. 5 (AP).—Approximately 500 horses already are checked into their stalls at the Fair Grounds race track here, preparatory to the Thanksgiving Day opening at the historic course.

Track officials said today some 3600 horses are seeking space in the 1200 available stalls at the track, whose history goes back 75 years.

Fullback Birge Tops

Episcopal Scoring Machine Leads Area by Wide Margin

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Episcopal High School of Alexandria has a long lead on every area school in points scored and, with three games to play, it doesn't look as though anyone will approach the Virginians' record.

In six games to date, unbeaten Episcopal has run up 188 points or an average of 31.3 per contest.

Leading the point parade is Fullback Tom Birge, whose performance this season has been truly remarkable. Although he has taken part in but four games, Birge has crossed opponents' goal lines 10 times. He also has booted 9 extra points for a 69-point total.

Phil Duckett, 200-pound left halfback, has scored seven touchdowns for 42 points and Right Half Chris Holland is next with 24 on four end zone jaunts.

Quarterback Rufe Barkley, a cool field general and clever passer, has one of the best scoring averages hereabout. Barkley has tossed 56 times and completed 30 of these for a .536 percentage. Included in his 30 completions are six scoring passes.

The team as a whole has rushing average of 5.4 yards per try. Birge is also leading in this department with an 8.2 yard gain per rush in 32 efforts against enemy lines.

Conversely, Episcopal's defense has limited opposing teams to 2.2 yards per rush. Six opponents have scored only 25 points against Episcopal thus far.

Coach Bus Males, in seven years as coach at the Alexandria school has never put out an unbeaten team, although he has come close on more than one occasion.

Last year he has six straight victories behind him and only one game left, with Woodberry Forest. Episcopal's biggest rival. Woodberry trounced the Alexandrians and the unbeaten season went out the window.

This year Males refuses to make any predictions about possibilities of a perfect season.

But his high scoring boys have other ideas, and you can beat that they will be out to hand Woodberry Forrest a little sweet revenge.

Jarman Rolls 199 In Duckpin Game

Paul Jarman of the Hutchison bowling team rolled a 199 in Rosslyn Major Leaguecompetition to officially register the second highest duckpin game scored this season in the country.

Jarman's score was seven pins off the 206-pin 1947 record of Al Silverio, Meriden, Conn., and 40 pins off the 239-pin world's single game record held by Eddie Funaro of New Haven, Conn.

Five strike and five spares, including a triple-strike opening, gave Jarman a one-pin set victory over Paul Perkins of Winn Motors. Jarman's 454 set was the best local individual set rolled this year.

Red Sox Trainer, 30-Year Veteran, Reported Dropped

Boston, Nov. 5 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox have dropped "Win" Green, who had been connected with the American League baseball club for 30 years—the last 10 as trainer, The Boston Globe says.

Green conferred with General Manager Joe Cronin. Asked afterward whether Green was through, Cronin said "I don't know."

Ever since Joe McCarthy was named manager of the Boston club, Green has been rumored on his way out with reports he would be replaced by Eddie Froelich, who worked under McCarthy with the New York Yankees.

Green was offered a post with one of the Red Sox minor league clubs, The Globe said, but turned it down with the assertion "I'm too old to start riding buses again." Green joined the Red Sox in 1916 as a clubhouse attache and became trainer in 1938.

CHARITY...

and what your Community Chest does about it!

WHEN a few folks got together in 1928 to organize the Community Chest, their single purpose was to "receive, collect and hold funds for the benefit of agencies engaged in social, welfare and charitable work." Almost at once the historic depression came along. Relief needs were dominant. These agencies promptly centered public attention on relief issues, while carrying forward their regular services. Then came another war and an avalanche of social and economic problems. Again, immediate needs took the center of the stage . . . again obscuring the original purpose of the Community Chest agencies.

WHILE never an instrument for direct charity alone, your Community Chest agencies do provide food, shelter, medicine, clothing, whenever necessary. But their aims go beyond this . . . their scope is much broader. They start at the root of the problem and correct the condition that fosters the trouble.

TODAY there are 125 great social, health, charity and welfare agencies doing this great work every day of the year. Every one of us living here, daily reaps the benefits! Give generously! Give to all! Help guarantee these benefits!

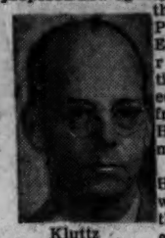
The Federal Diary

Civil Service May Exempt Aid Agency

By Jerry Kluttz

CIVIL SERVICE: The President and the Congress will be asked to exempt from Civil Service the proposed new agency to administer the Marshall Plan to aid Europe. The recommendation, it's reported, will come from the 19-man Harriman Committee.



Kluttz

However, the Harriman group will suggest that the new agency employes be given all other benefits of Federal employment such as retirement, pay rates, etc. The committee is said to have given some thought to higher salaries for the Marshall employes.

Like the Council of Economic Advisers, the Harriman group is said to be concerned over the problem of recruiting able people to administer European relief and reconstruction. In general, it's planned to draft top people from industry to operate the proposed new agency. Real trouble is anticipated in persuading industrial people to come here again because of the low Federal pay scales and the insecurity of Federal employment.

The Harriman report on administration is being drafted by former Senator Robert La Follette of Wisconsin.

BUDGET BUREAU: A second report on administration of the Marshall Plan is being drawn as a White House-Budget Bureau project. Working on it are:

John Steelman, Harold Stein, John Blandford, and Donald C. Stone.

This report, it's said, will suggest that major decisions on operation of the Marshall Plan be centered in the State Department. It will say that any other course would result in the creation of a second State Department. However, it will propose that an independent agency be created to operate the aid plan.

The White-House-Budget Bureau report also will insist that the vital committee to determine requirements of foreign aid be set up in the White House—probably under Steelman. The Harriman report will suggest that committee be a part of the Commerce Department. A third report to be issued by the Herter Committee of the House will recommend it be in the proposed independent agency.

COMMUNITY CHEST: Its worthy annual drive is under way, and we should all give as much as we are able. But some Federal workers who are plagued with the high cost of living and other obligations will be compelled to pass it up.

Various complaints of pressure are being heard from Federal workers. At the Army, Maj. Gen. E. S. Hughes, Chief of Ordnance, has told his employes in a memo:

"Each of us should give as his or her circumstances permit and that a 100 per cent participation WILL BE REQUIRED."

LOYALTY: Chairman Edward H. Rees of the House Civil Service Committee has again lambasted the President's Federal worker loyalty program. In a speech last night in Chicago, he said the program was haphazard, irresponsible, ineffective and that it threatens the security of our Nation. The House Civil Service leader charged:

1. That Civil Service has the names of 2500 employes about whom some question of loyalty has been raised. He said the FBI does not consult these files and that there is no requirement under the President's order that these employes be investigated.

2. That the loyalty questionnaires do not have a single question designed to secure information regarding membership in organizations advocating the overthrow of our Government, and,

3. That the President's program doesn't prevent an employe who is fired on loyalty charges by one agency from being hired in another agency.

Rees cited what he said was an actual case to demonstrate the "ineffectiveness" of the President's program. He said the FBI had investigated a girl employe—and had found this evidence:

Her loyalty was questioned by 11 competent persons; she was a member of three Communist fronts; she was married to a well-known Communist, and on one occasion she roomed with six known Communists, two of whom had been fired from the Government on loyalty grounds.

But the Civil Service chairman says she was cleared by the personnel director in the agency in which she was employed. Rees says he told the girl: "I hope that you were not inconvenienced by this investigation." He then said:

"The personnel director whose activities I have described has been detailed from his department to the position of top personnel adviser to Gen. Lucius D. Clay, who is presently charged with the responsibility of conducting civil affairs in the American zone of Germany. "In wonder," Rees asked "to what extent General Clay's personnel adviser is approving Communist sympathizers to positions in the American zone of occupation?"

Presumably, Rees refers to a Labor Department case. And if that's true, his attack is below the belt. That department had a three man committee to look into loyalty cases. The personnel officer was only one member. The final decision on all loyalty cases was made by the Labor Secretary. To blame the personnel director or any single member of the committee is grossly unfair.

Federation Official Backs Voting Plan

Armstrong Reveals His Support of District Suffrage For U. S. Employes

Kenneth P. Armstrong, treasurer of the Federation of Citizens Associations, yesterday strongly defended the proposal to let Federal employes in Washington vote and hold local elected office in a District home-rule setup.

Armstrong, in an interview, said that he disagreed with the idea of barring Federal employes from local voing on the ground that many of them escape paying the District income tax under the present law.

Federal employes would vote and could hold elected city offices here under the home rule plan proposed by the subcommittee of Representative James C. Auchincloss, (R., N. J.). Some local officials have oposed the idea of letting Federal employes here vote locally and still keep their State domiciles which let them escape paying the local income tax.

Armstrong said he believed the income tax, and the suffrage issue should be kept separate. He predicted the present District income tax law is going to be abolished one way or the other. He cited the bill of Senator Harr P. Cain (R., Wash.) that would repeal the local personal income tax law entirely.

He said it would be making a mountain out of a molehill to base a fight against the home rule plan on inequities in the present income tax law.

Armstrong is chairman of the Federation's committee on taxation and fiscal affairs, and of the local suffrage committee of the Central Suffrage Conference.

He said he has called a meeting of the local suffrage committee for November 13 to discus the Auchincloss report.

Apartment Rent Hike Is Opposed

Schuyler Arms Tenants Appear at Hearing On Proposed Boost

More than 35 tenants crowded into a Rent Control Administration hearing yesterday to oppose a 15 per cent rent boost for Schuyler Arms apartments, 1954 Columbia rd. nw.

Examiner William H. Clarke said the tenants, most of whom testified in their own behalf, cited lack of wall papering, floor painting, and other needed repairs. Ninety-six units are involved in the request for increase.

The owner, Howard Taylor, said the hike was necessary to cover cost of capital improvements, increased operating and maintenance expenses, and higher taxes, according to Clarke.

The proposed increase would raise $35-a-month apartments to $40, $75-a-month units to $86, he said.

William F. Mansfield, rent control secretary-docket clerk, announced last night that owners had asked approximately 15 per cent rent hikes for 86 apartment units at The Flagler, 736 22d st. nw.

Present rents range from $27.50 to $57.50 per month. Under the proposed boost, they would be raised to $33.50 and $65, respectively, Mansfield said.

Munsey Realty Co., which filed the petition, said the boost was needed to cover increased operating and maintenance costs and higher taxes, he revealed.

A New England clergyman is considering a call extended by fashionable St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, 18th and Church sts. nw., it was learned last night.

He is the Rev. Harold Sedgwick, rector of All Saints' Episcopal Church, Brookline, Mass. Should he accept, he will succeed Dr. Howard S. Wilkinson, who retired from the ministry September 1.

In a telephone conversation last night, Mr. Sedgwick said he would announce his decision within a week or ten days.

From 1935 to 1938, he was assistant rector of Christ Episcopal Church, Cambridge, of which the rector then was Dr. C. Leslie Glenn, now rector of St. John's Church, Lafayette Square. Mr. Sedgwick studied at the Episcopal Theological Seminary, Cambridge, in the early 1930's, when the dean was Dr. Angus Dun, now Bishop of the Washington Episcopal Diocese.

Mr. Sedgwick is 39 and single. Before enrolling at Cambridge, he studied at Phillips Exeter Academy, Exeter, N. H., and at Harvard University.

President Franklin Delano Roosevelt frequently worshipped at St. Thomas' Church. He was a vestryman there while Assistant Secretary of the Navy in World War I and an honorary warden while in the White House. The church has a membership of 1500.

Dancing Girls, Boys at Work Help Daughter Of Founder Mark Barney House Birthday

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

"PUT THEM ON THIS WAY, SANDRA"—At Barney Neighborhood House, Jackie Cheseldine, 4, of 825 7th st. sw., helps Sandra O'Shell, 3, of 1400 Canal st. sw., get her stockings on and her shoes on the right feet after a noon nap

There's a bumper crop of citizenship sprouting not far from Washington's venerable Wheat Row.

The roots go deep—to the 1790s. Then the area was a center of the city's culture, officialdom and fine living. John Wheat, for whom the row was named, lived at 1315-1319 4th st. sw.

Not far away, at 468 N st, lived able jurist Judge William Cranch, whose fifty-odd years of protecting rights and citizenship from the bench never saw a Supreme Court reversal.

Yesterday afternoon little girls were dancing the "Lady Helen Polka" to a battered but tuneful piano in the judge's old house.

In converted stables across an enclosed courtyard, schoolboys still too young to "make the team" at school were playing basketball. Industriously quiet little tykes who were only 15 minutes away from their afternoon school books were building toy boats of scrap lumber in a makeshift carpenter shop.

The reason they weren't on busy 4th st., trying to weave their way through traffic after a ball or loafing on corners contriving mischief was the 46-year-old Barney Neighborhood House, 470 N st. sw.

Oldest neighborhood house in the city, it was celebrating its forty-sixth birthday yesterday. Spirit of the occasion even felt its way down to the tow-haired lad in the carpenter shop who was trying to do just a little better job on his toy boat. The hull was sandpapered to racing-scull sleekness.

The neighborhood house has been nurturing its citizenship seeds through the inclement weather of insufficient funds and dust storms of disinterest from those who can help insure a paying crop.

Its support is the Community Chest, the interest of a few individuals and the self-sufficiency it attempts.

Visitors, many of them old grads still attending, flocked through Judge Cranch's old home for "open house" yesterday. In the crowd for tea was the woman whose mother, Mrs. Alice Pike Barney, made the home possible. Mrs. Laura Dreyfus-Barney with her mother gave the settlement its early financial start; helped shape its policies.

For the boys' gymnasium in the converted stables, the house had to borrow boxing equipment. They even had to borrow a boxing instructor, who is still working for nothing.

A rusting, pot-bellied stove is being readied to fight the chill in the boxing ring section and the basketball court. A one-stall shower was built by the staff and the boys.

They were trying to get a football team or two, but equipment at $25 a boy far out-balanced allowance. Individual donations had the fund up to $325—but that was as far as it went. They had to return all but $200, which the Touchdown Club had given and urged them to keep for some other purpose.

One of the boys broke into the Neighborhood Huse a year ag; stole $25 of the money. Then 15, he was taken to juvenile court at his mother's request when they caught him. Today, after reporting each Friday for a year to fulfill probation requirements, he is called "one of our best boys."

There were 23 children in the day nursery at 1319 4th st. sw. yesterday — children whose only parent must work. In frugal, crowded, but spic-and-span surroundings, they are cared for on the basis of what the parent can pay.

Mothers of three of them work because the father was killed in the war; some are from broken homes.

The laughing of children, the busy chatter of "open house" and the polka music poured out of the red brick house through the afternon and evening.

They were selling pies, cakes and cookies; dresses the girls have made and rocking horses the boys had made to help pay their own way.

Coar Disputes Accuracy of Voice Article

Robert J. Coar, adviser on House and Senate recordings facilities, of the November American Magazine account of his description of presidential candidates' voices.

Coar said he did not place Harold E. Stassen at the top and Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio at the bottom of a list ranking Presidential candidates according to the personality of their radio voices.

"I at no time listed the men in a descending order," he said, "but merely attempted to classify the voices from a standpoint of the technique of delivery. Not being in a position to make an audience survey, there would be no accurate means for me to ascertain audience appeal."

Coar said the "most flagrant and embarrassing misquotations" concerned President Truman, Senator Taft and Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan. In describing the voice of Taft, Coar said he used the phases, "business like, crisp, extremely factual and occasionally dry."

"I at no time used the word 'arbitrary,'" Coar declared.

"As to President Truman, I said his voice was dry since it lacked the color that was inherent with President Roosevelt, and in the past year there had been a marked improvement in the President's style of delivery and his general radio speaking voice.

"There were several phrases in the description of Senator Vandenberg's voice which were omitted. One of the more important ones was that I felt his voice would cause the listener to visualize a typical statesman."

Coar said his position with the Congress is "strictly nonpolitical" and that his services "are extended equally to all members and all parties."

Jury Finds Williams of Unsound Mind

A District Court jury yesterday found Dan Williams, jr., 40, charged with fatally shooting two men and wounding two others at Municipal Court last May, to be of unsound mind.

The panel of 10 men and 2 women deliberated only 35 minutes before returning its verdict. At Williams' request, each juror was polled. The verdict was unanimous. Williams will be committed to an asylum.

After hearing the testimony of several psychiatrists from St. Elizabeths and Gallinger Hospitals, Williams, a disbarred lawyer from Mississippi, took the stand to declare that the story of the slayings was a conspiracy against him and that they had never actually occurred. He stated that he had seen one of the men he supposedly killed, later walking around Gallinger Hospital.

The psychiatrists, who included Dr. William Cushard, Dr. Edgar E. Griffin and Dr. Joseph Gilbert, stated that Williams are suffering from a mental disorder involving a persecution complex and illusions of grandeur.

Williams was indicted for the fatal shooting of Ray Devendorf, 65, a clerk in the office of Courts Committee on Admissions and Grievances, and Police Pvt. Hubert W. Estes, 51. He was also charged with wounding George W. Dalzell, 69, of 8 Hesketh st., Chevy Chase, Md., secretary of the committee, and Cecil A. Craig, 43, of 1337 28th st. se., a civil guard.

Dog Killer Fined

In Fairfax Police Court yesterday George Koustenis was fined $25 and costs for shooting to death two rabbit hounds owned by Harry E. Robbins. Koustenis said he was "sick and tired of having dogs kill his chickens."

'Modest' Sales Tax Cut Proposed by Gov. Lane

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 5.—Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., today promised Maryland taxpayers a tax reduction of "modest proportions." More specifically, he recommended raising the minimum exemption base of the State sales tax to 14 cents.

He outlined his recommendations to a joint meeting of State Senators and Delecates, in the House of Delegates here, at opening of the special Assembly called by him to enact emergency legislation.

Governor Lane also recommended:

1. Lifting present restrictions on bond issues authorized for construction of super-highway within Maryland, asking that the funds be made available for construction of less ambitious primary roads "of greatest benefit to present day users of our highways."

2. Doubling the present maximum state aid to indigent patients in private hospitals from the present $5 daily allowed to $10. He estimated the additional cost to the state under such grants would be $1,067,000.

Opposes Welfare Request

The Governor, in his business-like message, opposed a request of the State department of public welfare for "a very substantial supplemental appropriation" (more than three million dollars) for operations to June 30, 1949. Instead, he asked the legislators to authorize an "emergency" public welfare fund of $500,000 "subject to allocation in emergency by the board of public works."

Even as the Governor spoke, proponents of outright repeal of the State sales tax readied themselves for at least a token fight against the unpopular tax. Petitions asking repeal, including one with 4200 signers in Prince Georges County, were sent to the Governor's office.

Representative S. Pete Pollack, Democrat, Baltimore City, introduced a bill asking repeal of the sales tax at the end of its first fiscal year, in 1948. Companion bills, including one to tax and control bookmaking within Maryland, were introduced with the repeal measure.

Similar Measure

A similar measure, without the companion bills, was introduced in the Senate by Robert B. Kimble, (Rep., Allegany). Both repealers were referred to the respective rules committees—in the Senate without comment, in the House with protests from the floor that such action would mean the end of the measure.

Proponents of repeal of the sales tax, however, may still get their say in the opportunity to attempt to tag on crippling amendments to administration sales tax "readjustment" bills.

State Senator Paul J. Bailey, (R., St. Marys County), introduced a bill seeking to legalize "mechanical amusement machines," better known as slot machines and one-armed bandits in St. Marys County. It was referred to the rules committee of the Senate.

Residents of St. Marys County have crusaded for an end to slot machine operations in the county. They have charged that, though the machines are illegal, the law is violated openly in many parts of the country.

The bookmaking bill would set up a booking commission of three members, authorized to license bookmakers at $3500 annually plus 1 per cent of bets entered on the books. Pollack estimated the state "take" on such licensings and taxing at "over three millilon dollars."

None Too Optimistic

Representative Pollack was none too optimistic about passage of his measures. Even Delegates from Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, outspoken against the sales tax, indicated they would not support repeal measures at this session.

"What's the use of fighting for something we know we cannot win," declared Anders R. Lofstrand, Republican chairman of the Montgomery County delegation. "Even if repeal was voted, the governor would veto it after the session closed. And he certainly wouldn't call us back to override his veto."

Speaking on problems of Baltimore financing, which initiated the call for the off-year session, Governor Lane gave his blessing to the city's request for adidtional authority to levy special taxes, "with specific limitations and for temporary period of four years."

"In order to protect the State's sources of revenue," the Governor declared, "I recommend that the municipality be specifically enjoined from levying any tax on incomes, individual or corporate; on gasoline or motr vehicles; on corporations as such; on inheritances, direct or collateral; on horse racing, or on insurance premiums."

Won't Be Introduced

A proposed request for similar special taxing authority for Montgomery County, it was learned here today, was voted down at a meeting Monday night of the county commissioners and the county delegates. Representative Lofstrand said without qualification, today that the proposed Montgomery County measure would not be introduced.

Governor Lane also recommended honoring Baltimore's request for authority to submit to Baltimore voters the questions of an added loan of $2,500,000 for construction of a stadium, and an additional eight million dollars public building and structure bond issue, principally for health clinics and a tuberculosis unit at Baltimore City Hospitals.

Speaking on the sales tax, Governor Lane declared:

"Because of the experience now at hand, as the result of three months collection of revenue from the retail sales tax . . . your assemblage at this extraordinary session presents the opportunity for a readjustment of the levy.

"Our revenue officers feel, and I am in agreement with them, that we can safely raise the minimum figure at which the tax is imposed from 9 cents to 14 cents without endangering the soundness of the tax structure on which our biennial budget is erected.

Would Eliminate Irritation

"I believe that the adjustment of the base at which the tax is imposed from 9 cents to 14 cents will eliminate much of the minor irritation that inevitably accompanies any form of direct taxation. Perhaps the greatest beneficiaries would be children who no longer would have to pay the tax on ice cream and confections."

He left "to the discretion of the General Assembly," the question of whether or not the legislators should authorize the board of public works to further up the sales tax minimum "as dependable experience figures become available."

In rejecting the board of public welfare's plea for additional operating revenue, Governor Lane ignored a last minute appeal for a special appropriation of one million dollars "need for the next six months."

The appeal was made personally to the Governor only this morning by W. Wallace Lanahan, board chairman, who said the extra money "would barely permit the board to continue relief payments at present levels."

The Governor asked the legislators to authorize appropriations of $53,294 for the balance of 1948 and $70,280 for 1949 to meet increased costs of feeding uniformed members of the State Police department; $50,000 needed to put into operation the chest surgery clinic, at Mount Wilson, and $80,000 for its maintenance in 1949.

He also asked $100,000 extra to meet expenses of administering the sales tax law for each of the fiscal years, 1948 and 1949; $125,000 for development of airports, and $25,000 to cover costs of the special Assembly.

The Governor's address, at 3:15 p. m., was preceded by openings of the State Senate and the House of Delegates and organization of the two bodies. Such organization, however, was routine, since both formed themselves as they were on adjournment at the last General Assembly, last March.

Perry O. Wilkinson, of Hyattsville, Md. (D., Prince Georges), enjoyed a moment in the main spotlight when he was nominated and elected pro-tem speaker of the House of Delegates. He presided only long enough to deliver the oath of office to a new Representative and for the reelection of C. Ferdinand Sybert (D., Howard County), as Speaker.

As the legislators swung into action, Representative Lofstrand revealed one new bill that the Montgomery County delegation had introduced for consideration. The bill, he said, would authorize the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission to license plumbers to hook in water lines to individual homes.

Present regulations, Lofstrand said, permit the work to be done only by crews of the commission. The result, he said, has been a gradual piling up of orders, with home owners forced to wait their turn.

Following the Governor's address, both house and senate began work on the flood of some 75 bills which were divided among the two bodies. They recessed at 5 p. m. for supper and met again at 8 p. m. for several more hours of work.

The legislators obviously were trying to finish speedily, but none could foresee adjournment by Friday night. Tentative adjournment dead line bills introduced independently of legislative council sanction were referred to the rules committees, where many may die aborning, in an effort to expedite legislation. Decision for such action was made in presession caucuses today.

Round 4—Mr. and Mrs. Reducing Bout

How to Snub Appetite

By Ida Jean Kain

BY AND large an overweight man takes his avoirdupois lightly, which makes it twice as hard for him to stick to the strait-and-reducing path. So here are some dietary tricks to snub the appetite up short and help keep the both of you happy though dieting. These tips are based on the science of nutrition, the physiology of hunger, and good common sense.

Use science . . . hunger is appeased by a sensation of warmth in the stomach. To impart comfort for few calories, start the meal with a piping hot soup or bouillon. And build each meal around a protein dish—fish, cheese, cottage cheese, milk, eggs, lean meat, meat organs or fowl. Protein is highly satisfying, sticks to the ribs and stimulates the burning of fuel in the body. You are entitled to a protein food with each meal, but none of us is entitled to overeat, or to waste food. Save on wheat . . . restrict bread to three, or at the most, four slices a day. Save on fats . . . they pile on pounds 2¼ times faster.

Use practical plans too . . . assuming the meal is served family style—with the main dish flanked by a couple of vegetables placed in front of the head of the house—when everyone has been served, remove the food from the table thus removing the temptation for second and third helpings. The children get the seconds—provided they clean up their plates. No waste allowed.

With the main dish whisked away, to fill the gap, bring in a bulky salad (with little dressing) served with crisp wafers, the kind that require chewing. This advances the "stop eating" signal. It's fullness of the stomach that rings the bell and this fullness is caused by tension exerted from within on the muscle fibers of the stomach. Bulky space fillers, though low in calories, bring on the "full" effect. Make liberal use of salad greens, coleslaw, celery, raw carrot sticks, crunchy crackers and such.

Dessert? If his favorite is deep dish apple pie, he won't be altogether pleased with a fresh fruit cup. Bring his favorite cigar with it . . . and steaming hot coffee. And on with the diet.

Career Women Tell Club of Work-a-Day Roles

Five successful career women let down their hair to give inside glimpses of their work-a-day jobs. Occasion was the Washington Soroptimist Club's luncheon featuring "career women" yesterday in the Willard Hotel.

Dynamic Mrs. Blanche Noyes, authority on aviation, said that in bad weather she writes textbooks for airmarkings, designs airmarkers.

Chief of the air marking section, Civil Aeronautics Authority, she explained, "I am lucky. So far I am the only woman who has made a living flying." Adding, "and I haven't had too much difficulty with men. The only time I really resented one was when they lowered the bars to permit women to compete in the Bendix Air Trophy flight from the East to West Coast.

"When I pulled in the judge rushed up to me and said, 'Blanche, I am afraid you are the winner'."

Eva H. Boothby, general manager and only woman on the editorial staff of the Kiplinger Washington Letter, told how she began in the organization when it was first started. "I am called the 'prissy department,'" she explained. "When the men writers use too strong language I am called in to accept or reject."

Helen Beck, secretary of the Washington College of Preachers at the Washington Cathedral, allowed as how she probably knows more clergymen than any girl about. Besides helping to set up schedules for the men who come to the school for postgraduate study, she attends to correspondence and sometimes personal errands.

Catherine Krieg, assistant cashier and assistant to the president of Riggs National Bank, pointed out that within the past 15 years Washington has become an important financial center.

Jean Frear, owner and operator of the "Questers"—a Georgetown antique shop, recalled how she had pawned her ring to obtain the necessary fare to look for a job at Marshall Field's in Chicago; how she dipped into interior decorating, architecture and once made a purple bed for a Follies scene.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Has Three Beautiful Children Whom She Adores; But by Spells She Is Mean and Cold, Delights in Punishing Them and Hates Herself

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I do not understand myself, and perhaps you can help me decipher why I am like I am, and how I can overcome my chief fault, being sadistic.

I believe I have a Jekyll-Hyde nature. At times I am a warmly affectionate and devoted mother; and at other times mean, cold and indifferent. I have three beautiful children whom I adore; and then again I take pleasure in mistreating them.

When they are angels I caress and praise them; but just as soon as they misbehave I shout and spank or slap them and seem to enjoy doing it. Sometimes I actually wish they would do something naughty just so I can inflict punishment on them. I delight in seeing them cringe and beg forgiveness, which I coldly deny.

Prays for Help In Curbing Sadism

THEN at night when I lie abed I think of how horrible I have been and I weep with pity for them and pray for guidance in overcoming this trenchant nature of mine. I virtually hate myself for my misdeeds and long to be always a benign mother to my children.

I might add that although I love and admire my husband I have never enjoyed physical relations with him. Would this have anything to do with my actions toward my children? E. B.

Exacts Impossible Of Self and Others

DEAR E. B.: You think you have a Jekyll-Hyde nature because you are so full of conflict on the score of trying to cope with unconscious hostile emotions, which you can't read or understand, that are always fighting against your conscious aspiration to be a "good" woman deserving of love, admiration and trust.

Simply said, you are trying to cast yourself in a role, without being aware of your true feelings in response to any given situation or personal relationship.

On the conscious side, you expect too much of yourself, perfectionist fashion, and consequently make the same mistake with others. Moreover, your standards of fine behavior don't take account of what would be approximately par for the individual, considering his intrinsic potentials.

Strains Too Hard Breaking Control

YOU tend to think strictly in terms of good or bad, black or white, saint or devil. And by spells you strain yourself to the breaking point, trying to be a shining white angel as wife and mother, with the result that in compensation o[f] some Nature blows the lid off yo[ur] well-meant pretense or ambitio[n] efforts to be superhuman—and te[r]rific hostilities come boiling to th[e] surface.

These negative emotions, common to all mankind, are then at white heat, like erupting lava, seemingly irrational, sadistic, etc., due to being pent up and having to force themselves on your consciousness.

If in the course of daily events you were self-acceptingly aware of a mingled stream of both positive and negative reactions to others, and if you calmly appraised the negative feelings—indignation, dismay, disapproval, etc.—to decide whether they are justified, as they sometimes are, or instead reflect personal pettiness, momentary weariness, etc., you would hold the key to sane self-government.

Cure Is Becoming Wisely Self Aware

INSTEAD of ventilating your negative emotions in your conscious mind, to pass discriminating judgment on them, you are trying to keep them wholly submerged, and thereby choking off about 90 per cent of your positive potentials, too. That's why you are a frigid wife; also why your spasmodic "adoration" of the children doesn't ring true.

However, the business of becoming self-acceptingly aware of the mingled stream of one's emotions, so as to achieve rational selective mastery of them, is easier said than done. As Karen Horney points out in her excellent book, "Self Analysis," (W. H. Norton & Company, publishers) trained analytic guidance is necessary to start the process; after which it can be cultivated as a constructive lifetime habit. In my opinion, this course of action offers the solution of your problem. M. H.

TOMORROW: Parents part young lovers, who make other [m]arriages and have children, but still feel—in mature age—that they were meant to be mates.

Mount Vernon Celebrates on 73d Birthday

The seventy-third anniversary of the founding of Mount Vernon Seminary was celebrated yesterday with a commemoration service at 11 a. m. in the former Elizabeth J. Somers Chapel, now a United States Navy Chapel, at the old school site, and a tea in the afternoon at the new school, 2100 Foxhall rd nw.

The day was also observed as the birthday of its founder, Mrs. Elizabeth J. Somers.

Lieutenant Commander Shilling read the prayers at the morning service and Dr. A. Powell Davies of All Souls' Church delivered the address.

Among those present at the tea were Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, Mrs. Charles Hamilton Maddox, Mrs. Boyd Taylor, Mrs. John B. Smiley, Mrs. Joseph R. Trew, Mrs. George Hubert, Mrs. Richard W. Hynson, Mrs. Charles W. Fairfax, Mrs. Willoughby S. Chesley, Deaconess Mary Isabel Potter of Los Angeles, Calif.; Miss Elsie Foederer, chairman of the board of trustees, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Seymour Preston and Miss Betty Gilbert of Lancaster, Pa. Mrs. George W. Lloyd, headmistress, was hostess.

Highlight of the afternoon was the candle-blowing ceremony over the tiered birthday cake, with noted alumnae, class officers and former graduates, who have daughters and granddaughters in the school, taking part. The cake was baked by Sam, the chef, who has been with the school for 37 years.

By Henry Rohlaid—The Washington Post

It was a draw as to who enjoyed the huge birthday cake more—Sam, the chef who created the masterpiece or the alumnae members who turned out full strong at the 75th anniversary celebration of Mt. Vernon Seminary yesterday. Here Mrs. George W. Lloyd, head mistress of Mt. Vernon (left), helps Mrs. Joseph Davies, class of 1904 (right), cut the piece de resistance, while Samuel Robinson, who has been chef at the school since 1910, watches

Your Baby and Mine

All Children Tell Whoppers Of Necessity, Not by Choice

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Of course your child is going to tell lies some of the time. You should expect it and try not to be too upset. Not that you should be indifferent to untruthfulness—far from it—but you should know and recognize the commonplace reasons why children deviate from the truth.

Any child, unmindful of facts and eager to make a good story that will cause his hearer's eyes to stick out, will magnify the facts. Your surprise and your astonishment are an incentive to do more of the same. He may fall into a pattern of making everything bigger and bigger. Think of how few ways a child has of engaging the attention and interest of the parent, and then see how appealing it would become to embroider a story so it had the power to attract both.

Children enlarge on figures. They say a million instead of a dozen. Time, space, amounts, sizes, are all thought of in terms beyond the ordinary. Then the story has a value it would lack if the real facts were told.

We do not want to curb the child's imagination. We need not, as long as he knows and we know that his stories are imaginary. Hold him down to facts when facts are important. Let his fancy roam when it is merely a good story he is telling.

Children lie to build up their wavering self-esteem. They want friends and companions. They want approval, praise and admiration. If these are denied them, they concoct exploits, magnify their behavior so it serves as a pedestal upon which they can climb.

When we find that a child is being forced to make up acts, enhance behavior so as to make it more pleasing to his public, we should hasten to provide him with legitimate opportunities to shine.

Let's recognize that it is the social underdog; the child with no obvious talents or skills; the one who is not a beauty, who must decorate his or her own drab personality with glitter.

Our part is to understand the ordinary reasons why children lie and meet that challenge. Children do not lie from choice but from necessity. We must erase that necessity.

Your Questions On Homemaking

Can chair caning be done at home as a hobby and, if so, where may supplies be purchased? Also, where can I find instructions? R. E. S.

Yes, chair caning can be done at home. The cane is sold by at least one local dealer in upholstery supplies. This company sells both real cane and plastic cane, which is a great deal cheaper. For further information, call District 7447. Instructions on chair caning can be found in books obtainable at public libraries.

I have a cuckoo clock which I have had for some time. As long as my husband was alive he took the entire care of it and it kept splendid time. Recently, however, a member of the household who was unfamiliar with it attempted to adjust it. Now it strikes the hour on the half hour and vice versa. Can you tell me if there is someone in this city who can fix the clock? G. R. S.

Listed under "Clocks—Repairing" in the yellow section of your telephone book are a number of firms with experts who can repair cuckoo clocks.

Can you tell me the procedure for pickling a mahogany table. I am quite anxious to do this job myself and would appreciate your advice on the chances of doing a good job. V. R. G.

Mahogany can be pickled satisfactorily at home, but both care and patience are needed to do a professional-looking job. First apply strong paint and varnish remover to soften the old finish. Scrape off with putty knife, then sand with sandpaper wrapped around a wooden block to take off all the old finish. Wipe with alcohol to neutralize the effect of the paint and varnish remover. Next, bleach the wood with a strong commercial bleach, following instructions on the package. When wood is dry, sandpaper the surface with fine-grained paper and brush off all dust carefully. Then rub on white lime, or white lead, or a coat of flat white paint. Wipe it off almost at once. After a day or two of drying, apply a thin coat of shellac. Dry thoroughly. Sandpaper the surface lightly with fine-grained paper. The final process is applying liquid wax. From three to ten coats can be applied to good advantage. Properly pickled mahogany has a pinkish, warm-colored surface which is very lovely.

How can I get rid of small brown bugs in my pantry closets? I haven't any roaches in the house, but these little bugs seem to be coming into the food. M. M. D.

First, remove all food from the shelves. Wash shelves and spray them and the surrounding area with a residual spray containing 5 per cent DDT. When spray has dried thoroughly, replace food packages which are not infested by the bugs. If possible, keep food in tin cannisters. Have all of it well-covered, at any rate, and wipe up any spilled food immediately so that it won't attract the bugs. Spray with the DDT every two weeks for awhile. (Never use it directly on food packages or allow food itself to come in contact with the spray.) If the bugs are coming to the closet from some other part of the house, you should be able to get rid of them. However, there's always a chance that they may come in on newly purchased food.

Is there any way to whiten pearls (simulated ones, of course) which have turned yellow? D. C.

Jewelers say that once such pearls have yellowed there's no way of bleaching them white again.

Friday's Peace Plate Menu

The Citizens Food Committee suggests the following food saving menu for tomorrow:

Baked Fish and Spinach
Cottage fried potatoes — Buttered beets
Piping hot oatmeal biscuits
Tart sweet fruit salad

For the salad use diced and unpeeled apples, sliced dates and a few orange sections and you will need no dessert.

The oatmeal biscuits may be made by substituting half oatmeal in your baking powder biscuit recipe.

BAKED FISH AND SPINACH

3 cups drained, hot, cooked, well-seasoned spinach (3 pounds).
1½ pounds fish fillets.
1¼ teaspoons salt.
¼ teaspoon sugar.
⅛ teaspoon paprika.
1 cup grated American cheese.
1 egg, beaten.
2 tablespoons flour.
1 tablespoon butter or fortified margarine.
¼ teaspoon pepper.

Arrange spinach in large, shallow, greased baking dish. Arrange fish on top; then sprinkle with mustard, ½ teaspoon of the salt, sugar and paprika combined. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) 30 minutes. Meanwhile, combine remaining ingredients, except milk, in double boiler. Gradually stir in milk; then cook over boiling water until smooth and thickened, while stirring. Pour over fish; then brown under broiler heat or in hot oven (425 degrees Fahrenheit). Serves 6. Flounder, cod, sole, halibut or haddock fillets may be used for this dish. Spinach, fresh, canned or quick-frozen can be used.

PETUNIA!

How blithe is my perfume
How lightsome and gay!

My goodness gracious
I smell good today!

Careful, Petunia! Don't spray perfume directly on your clothes . . . it may stain them. Put it directly on your temples and throat. The warmth of the skin enhances the scent and makes it last longer, too.

Bishop-Bracken

Oh for Ponè Like Army Used to Bake

Fort Meade, Md., Nov. 5 (AP).—Maj. Robert J. Dickson, commandant of the Second Army's Food Service School, today displayed this letter from Mrs. H. J. Grimm of Milwaukee:

"Dear Sir: Would it be possible to obtain your recipe for corn bread? My husband has raved about the corn bread the Army gave him ever since he was discharged two years ago.

"I have tried various recipes, and none seem to be up to the Army's."

Major Dickson sent the Army recipe along all right, but it's for 100 men. So the major sent along Mrs. Dickson's recipe, too.

The Army's recipe for 100 persons:

Sugar, granulated, 6 ounces.
Corn meal, 3 pounds.
Baking powder, 3 ounces.
Salt, 2 ounces.
Milk, evaporated, 29 ounces.
Water, 1 quart.
Eggs, beaten, 10.
Shortening, melted, 1 pound.

Step 1—Sift flour, sugar, corn meal, baking powder and salt together.

Step 2—Mix milk, water and beaten eggs.

Step 3—Add mixture to dry ingredients, partially mix. Add melted shortening, stir only until dry ingredients and liquids are combined. Avoid overmixing.

Step 4—Spread mixture in greased baking pan. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) about 20 minutes. Makes 12 pounds, 120 pieces 2 1/3 by 2¾ by 1 inch.

Mrs. Dickson's recipe, for 2 persons:

1 cup yellow corn meal
3 tablespoons white flour
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
1 heaping tablespoon shortening

Mix all the dry ingredients. Beat egg and add enough milk to make a little more than half a cup. Pour milk into dry ingredients and beat fairly well. Melt shortening and pour into batter. Mix well. Pour batter into baking pan and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for a good 20 minutes. Six servings.

Fairfax Board Asks Map on Sanitary Plan

Fairfax County Board of Supervisors yesterday ordered a map drawn of the proposed new sanitary district for the northeastern section of the county.

Next step will be to obtain from the circuit court an order authorizing a referendum on a bond issue for the project.

A committee representing the 7-square-mile McLean-Langley-Chesterbrook area presented a petition with 145 names asking the district be established.

Representatives said by setting up their own sewer and water system as permitted to occupants of a sanitary district, they may be able to reduce fire insurance rates by as much as 50 per cent on the rough adequate firefighting facilities.

The board approved and sent to the State Board of Education, a school board request for a $520,000 loan from the State Literary Loan Fund for new schools at Sim's Corner and Hardin Hall.

An additional $4272.90 was allocated to the County Welfare Department to carry it through remainder of the fiscal year.

4 Prisoners Sought After Md. Escape

Four prisoners who sawed their way out of Charles County jail at La Plata, Md., early yesterday were caught by police in 17 States last night.

The search, however, centered in the Marlboro section, after a stolen car in which the men are believed to have fled was found abandoned on Croome Station rd., a short distance south of the town.

The prisoners were identified by State's Attorney Vernon A. Carrico as Pearl Simpson, 53, Doncaster, Md., who was awaiting grand jury action on charges of rape and assault with intent to kill; Lewis Williams, 17, Welcome, Md., held for the grand jury on a rape charge; Samuel A. Jackson, 29, Raleigh, N. C., held for the grand jury on charges of larceny and housebreaking, and William McClellan, 23, no address given, who was serving a 60-day sentence for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. All are Negroes.

According to Carrico, the break was discovered about 6:30 a. m. by Jailer Vernon Dorsey during a routine morning check. He said the men sawed the bars out of two adjoining cells on the second floor of the building, then climbed to the attic and sawed a hole in the slate-covered roof.

Dorsey said the men slid 30 feet from the roof to the ground on a garden hose they had carried from the second floor of the building. A hacksaw, which the State's attorney said he believed had been smuggled into the jail, was found in the attic.

Carrico said all four of the men had been visited by members of their families during the past few days.

Only a few minutes after the escape was discovered, police received a report from Alfred Hill of White Plains, about 3 miles from La Plata, that his automobile had been stolen from in front of his home some time between 1 a. m. and 6:30 a. m. The car was recovered by State police around 6 p. m.

5 Seamen Fined After Night Riot On Bay Steamer

Baltimore, Nov. 5 (AP).—Five European seamen were transferred from engine room shackles to a Baltimore City jail today, after a night riot on the Old Bay Line steamer City of Norfolk.

Riot squads met the boat when it docked after its overnight trip up the Chesapeake Bay.

Patrick O'Sullivan, of New York, first officer of the steamship North Valley, said the five men barged into his cabin on the City of Norfolk and started the battle royal. He said they were crewmen aboard the North Valley, recently docked at Newport News, Va., after a six-month voyage to the Middle East, and apparently had boarded the City of Norfolk to "take it out on me" for fines imposed during the North Valley cruise.

Pietor Zacharewicz and Henry Nowak, 23-year-old Poles, and Knut Zohernsen, 21-year-old Norwegian, were fined $50 each and costs on charges of assaulting O'Sullivan. Helge Smortband, 23, and Edmond Amundsen, 22, Norwegians, two others involved, were fined $20 each on disorderly conduct charges.

Virginia Towns Asked to Set Up Food Committees

Richmond, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—Officials of 190 Virginia cities and towns with populations under 10,000 were asked today to establish citizens' food committees to aid in carrying out President Truman's request for conservation efforts.

The request, in the form of letters from Chairman Raymand V. Long of the State committee, carried, however, no recommendation that the President's meatless Tuesdays and poultryless and eggless Thursdays be observed.

As the letters were mailed the Virginia Cooperative Crop Reporting Service showed that the State's stocks of all grains in storage on October 1 had declined about 3 per cent in comparison with those of a year earlier.

The crop service also disclosed that during the week of October 25, the effects of the plea for poultryless days had resulted for the first time in a sharp decrease in the number of eggs set in commercial hatcheries in comparison with a year earlier.

Betty Was Only Acting, but This Guy Is Serious

Betty Fiesler (whose home is in Short Hills, N. J.) played the part of a prize fight manager in the play, "One Punch Judy," which was presented at Catholic University last Sunday.

MISS FIESLER

Just before she made her appearance, Betty received a letter from Abe J. Greene, State athletic commissioner of New Jersey. The letter said:

"It has come to my attention that you are playing the part of a boxer and manager in a forthcoming production.

"In the fear that perhaps you may be transgressing on the boxing laws, I inclose a boxer's and manager's application form, and suggest that you execute and return them."

Go ahead and fill it out, Betty—but don't confuse it with the form that gives a woman the right to manage a man permanently—like the one Ann Howe would like to negotiate with Joe Palooka.

BILL BOOTS ONE

We recently carried an item about an out-of-town used car dealer who offered his wares for sale at so much per pound.

Allan P. Johnson of 1901 16th st. nw. informs me that a local dealer has been running the same kind of ads.

He's been offering such quotations as 43 cents per pound for choice, prime '42 Pontiacs, and 9 cents per pound for utility grade '36 Cadillacs.

The most disturbing thing about this discovery, for me, has been the news that these ads have appeared on the opposite side of this page—in The Washington Post classifieds.

If it weren't for all these loyalty checks, I'd say "my face is red."

PERSONAL NOTES

Paul H. Oehser, Cosmos Club: Very funny poem, but too long for this space. Thanks.

TOO MUCH OIL, EARL?

Mrs. Leonard Mitchel of 3441 14th st. nw. returns from a visit to New York with a clipping clenched in her angry fist.

It's a column written by the saloon editor of the New York Post, Earl Wilson. Earl came to Washington to cover the recent movie probe hearings, and wrote some very unpleasant things about our girls.

He reported that "Washington's sex-starved dollies . . . busted their garter belts . . . in a disgusting exhibition of excitement over Bob Taylor & Co."

Then he went on to describe the typical local secretary as:

". . . gourd-shaped, with face to match, around 64 years old, wearing a shawl, petticoats, and high button shoes."

Mrs. Mitchel thinks somebody ought to answer Earl, but I can't do it. Wilson was one year ahead of me at Ohio State, and we were taught never to be disrespectful to our elders.

But I will admit that the column sounds as if it was written while Wilson was well Earled.

HELP WANTED

This is the time of year when the Red Cross must move its recreational facilities indoors.

Veterans' hospitals and military camps need chess, checkers, backgammon, playing cards and various other games—but the Red Cross game closet is almost bare.

If you're in a position to share your indoor entertainment facilities with the boys, call Republic 8300, Extension 888 for pickup service.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

B. C. Stickley of Fairfax, Va., submits a clipping which says:

"In another unusual accident, police reported that a Wave lieutenant vaulted from a moving car at 41st and Calvert sts. nw., landing in Casualty Hospital."

"Some vault," remarks District Liner Stickley. "I wonder if she used a pole?"

ADD SIGNS

Jay Aitch lapses into prose temporarily to ask whether we ever heard about the sign he saw while winning the war practically single-handed.

In a Dallas cafeteria, he spotted:

"Courteous and efficient self-service here."

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Some place in the long ago, I stumbled across this quotation—and I wonder if any of you can recall who said it first. Whoever he was, he was a pretty smart guy:

"Today is the tomorrow that you worried about yesterday—and it didn't happen, did it?"

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Ambassador Bedell Smith, who returned to his Moscow post last week, was in New York long enough to hear the Soviet proposal at the U. N. regarding governmental curb on statements appearing in the American press. During the war General Smith found it difficult to make the Russian generals understand the freedom accorded American newspaper men. One day, when a Soviet officer asked that General Smith send back, by force, some displaced persons from Russian-dominated countries—persons who didn't want to return to any Russian zones—Smith said: "I couldn't do that. The newspapermen would denounce me for it." . . . "The newspapermen?" asked the Soviet general, in astonishment. "Would they have to know?"

Larry MacPhail sat with Horace Stoneham at Toots Shor's until 2:30 a.m. one morning, discussing the Giants ball team. "Next year I'm really going to criticize the Giants," MacPhail told him, "because next year I'll be just a fan. Just a fan."

Cobina Wright was in the Cub Room last night, telling of her plans for the royal wedding, to which she's been invited by the bridegroom. Mrs. Wright, who sails for England this week, still doesn't know whether it will be a daytime or evening event. "I'm taking enough clothes," she said, "to cover both." She asked the bridegroom's permission to do a magazine story and broadcasts about the wedding.

The tentative title of the new Henry Luce magazine is Measure.

A forest fire in Oakland, N. J., was brought under control last night after it had reached the farmlands of Sidney Kingsley's house. While 200 townsfolk helped in the fire fighting, Kingsley borrowed a bulldozer and dug the protective ditch which saved his house.

At 4 a.m. yesterday, after every Broadway entertainer had taken the floor at the Latin Quarter to pay tribute to Willie Howard, celebrating his fortieth anniversary in show business, Howard rushed back to a Brooklyn hospital where his wife is in an oxygen tent.

Gene Fowler will write the foreword to Harold Stassen's next book.

George Jessel was toastmaster at a luncheon for L. B. Mayer—who then had to discard his prepared speech of acknowledgement because Jessel, in introducing him, uttered none of the customary paeans but merely said: "In presenting our guest of honor to you, all I will say is—L. B. is no schmo."

The police who scoured the East 50's for the two holdup men who stuck up the Hotel Sutton Plaza at 2 a. m. today were joined in the pursuit by Bruce Cabot, Bob Topping and John Perona. They were driving on E. 58th st. when the alarm was sounded.
